The 7-Year Cycles in Your Life

by Wynn

Shakespeare's "Seven Ages of Man" have been speculated on by astrologically inclined students ever since the bard wrote of them—and before he wrote of them. In fact, there is every probability that they were taken directly from astrological precepts older than the records of history.

Two well authenticated systems of dividing our visit to this realm of necessary labors have come down to us from the ancients—both of them related to seven-year periods that commence with birth and continue until we pass on.

Our lives are partitioned off by these cycles, from the first breath to the seventh birthday being the first, from then till the fourteenth birthday being the second, and so on.

Please note that the birthday is the end of the year of life bearing its number. Thus: from birth to the time one is a year old, on his first birthday, is the first year. From the first birthday to the second birthday is the second year of life, although it said he "is one year old" all through his second year. How old is Mrs. A? We say she is 35, because on her preceding birthday she had completed 35 years of life, but she is in her 36th year—she has completed five of her seven-year cycles and is now in her sixth such period.

Thus we see that man has more than seven of these seven-year cycles or periods (if he lives more than 49 years). Several astrologers have offered another set of periods of life, not of equal length, some of which last almost three times as long as seven years. These are probably based upon Hindu planetary periods, and require a life longer than 49 years for completion. We may comment on these unequal periods at some future date, but right now we shall discuss only the regular 7-year cycle.

This 7-year cycle, with its rhythmic changes of planetary rulers and sub-rulers, has been glanced at carelessly by some quite serious students of astrology, for they have apparently not realized that the planetary rulers of the cycles and sub-cycles are keys that should be applied to each individual case according to the significance of those planets in the horoscope of the native upon whom it is being used.

This point in itself will resolve many astrological puzzles, for it is a principle hovering over all laws of individual application of celestial vibrations that whenever a planetary influence is working upon the factors in your character (your individual horoscope) it is that planet as seen through your nativity which is being applied to your affairs. For instance, Mr. X and Mr. Y were born in different years on the same date—their Sun positions are identical as to sign and degree, but Mr. X's Jupiter is trine to his Sun and Mr. Y's Jupiter is square to his Sun. Jupiter transits both their Sun positions at the same time, with vastly different results—directly because of the different significance of Jupiter's position and aspects in their respective natal charts.

This same principle is the key that will unlock the meanings of the seven-year periods and each year in them.

The order of the planetary rulers of the 7-year periods is the Chaldean, the same order that gives us the rulers of the days of the week and the atomic weight relationship of the ancient royal metals of the planets.

The first seven years of human life are under the Moon. This is very easy to perceive, for it is the period of infancy, during which the most important factors of environment are presided over by the mother (Moon); it is the period of establishing the recently arrived entity in its new Earth surroundings and connections (the Moon is the satellite of the Earth, and the Earth itself is our nurturing, sustaining natural mother).

Each of the 7-year periods is also related to a cycle of the great psychological elements, Earth, Water, Fire and Air, in that order, corresponding with the physical, vital, emotional and mental dominants of life.

We thus see that the first 7-year cycle is one that brings out the physical factors—the infant's most important function is to take root, build his body, become firm in his links to this world. This is particularly true of the first year, which is entirely lunar, for the first year of any 7-year period is ruled exclusively by the ruler of the entire period. In the infant's second year we see the sub-rulership or influence of Mercury, the planet of speech, and it is in this year that vocal capacity is organized into the first successful attempts to talk. An interesting sidelight of the second year is that girls usually start talking earlier and more readily than do boys; the ruler of the period, Moon, is more feminine than masculine and the polarity of these seven years is therefore more sympathetic to their natures than it is to those with male bodies, until the fourth and fifth years, when the masculine Sun and Mars take over the sub-rulerships.

The natal Moon is to be regarded almost exclusively (together with the planets to which it makes aspects in the birth horoscope) in determining the problem of surviving the first year. If the lunar position and condition is strong, all goes well; if not, it is a struggle to bring the little one through. Look at your own horoscope, taking the Moon alone, and see how it describes your first year. For your second year, take Moon and Mercury as they are in your nativity; for your third year, your Moon and Venus; and so on, as shown by the table of period and year rulers. The seventh year, sub-ruled by Saturn, is always a test of survival, giving rise to the axiom that if the human being can get through his or her first seven years the probability of surviving to maturity is about a thousand to one, barring the possibility of external violence. In other words, the testing of Saturn at the end of the first seven years of life establishes the inner resistance and endurance qualities for a normal physical existence. During this critical seventh year, the natal position and condition of Saturn in the individual case will describe the tests that are met.

The second 7-year period, from the seventh birthday to the fourteenth, commencing at the beginning of the eighth year and going through the fourteenth year, is the period of preliminary education, presided over by Mercury. This period is also related to the Fire, or vital, psychological element, bringing out the development of sex power from the 11th year on—the 11th being the Mars year in this period, Mars being the ruler of Scorpio, the sex sign. This is followed by Jupiter, the custodian of the principle of growth, as ruler of the 12th year of life. The emergence of sex power often appears under Jupiter, but it was first stirred in the Mars year. If it does not appear definitely in the 12th year, it usually lies dormant during the 13th, to come out under the lunar 14th. A personal study in the individual horoscope of the sex significance of the planets ruling these years will reveal whether the development will be early or late in this 7-year period.

The third 7-year period is under Venus and it is also under the element Water, which is the dominant of Emotion. Here we see the stimulation and development of the feelings along the entire emotional gamut, as well as the first realizations that life cannot be complete without the companionship and cooperation of the opposite sex. Man's artificial habits and statutes do not take this natural law into consideration—many of our customs go directly against it. We have put economic security and maturity before physical and emotional maturity in our social plan, which is one of the reasons why it doesn't work better than it does; we demand an artificial stifling of natural inclinations in this third 7-year-period, with the result that the interval between parents and children is often so great that one generation cannot understand the next one. And the artificial connotations and substitutions which our social "morality" produces would require a large volume merely to index.

Both the second and third 7-year periods are of such vast psychological significance that they cannot be too greatly emphasized for study, observation and directed education. We, as a race, have blithely termed these two critical, if not the most critical, periods of every human life "the formative years" and then left the rising generations to themselves while we struggle with the errors, mistakes and sins our parents made and permitted us to make in their and our "formative years." This was negatively realized in Hitler's program for conditioning German youth to the plan of world conquest he envisioned; he started bending the twig in the direction he wanted the tree to grow—which has already produced psychological problems that will endure far into the future, long after the present unpleasantness is physically over. Some day we must realize the facts of the formative years positively and give the coming men and women a better opportunity to make more than war out of life. That is the lesson of this present struggle of ideologies; it has been the lesson of all wars and struggles between the powers of light and darkness. Right here in the second and third 7-year periods of life that lesson must be learned. Some time the older generation must quit trying to justify its errors, admit them, and teach youth to do in great measure the opposite of what we have done.

Every parent, guardian and teacher should know the horoscope of the younger people who look up to him or her and make as certain as possible that the particular rulers of the period and sub-period, as placed and aspected in the individual nativity, be well understood and applied to the problems it brings up when in power.

The fourth 7-year period of life, beginning with the 21st birthday and lasting till the 28th, is of the Air element (mental) and is dominated by the Sun. We must not confuse this mental period with the educational period that occurred earlier under Mercury (8th to 14th years, inclusive). This is the period when the individual really uses his or her own mental equipment in independent thought (if not previously made into a rubber stamp of some educational institution). This is the period when he first can do some original thinking, when he can draw up from within his own depths the peculiar qualities of mind that identify him from everyone else.

But this does not mean that every man and woman at this period of life does come up with his or her best. Here, as in every moment of existence on this Earth, with every breath we take, the law of polarity (or duality) is at work. This is the law under which we have the power of choosing whether we will make our application of powers good or ill.

As in every year of every period, if in the natal horoscope there be an aspect between the ruler and sub-ruler of the year, that relationship of planets and the promises of the positions and signs involved will come out strongly in that year. This is why there are differences between different individuals at the same age, even though the ruler and sub-ruler for both are the same. They are the same planets, but to each human being the individual meaning of a planet is conditioned down to his or her needs for this life. The grand principles and laws that flow through the planetary rays to us arrive for individual use in psycho-chemical combinations and formulae which do not repeat. The 51st year is almost always a very important one in any person's life; look at it in the cases of F. D. R. and Hitler—it was in his 51st year that Roosevelt was first elected to the presidency. It was in his 51st year that Hitler precipitated World War II.

The fifth 7-year period, from 29th to 35th birthdays, starts the second series of four periods under the elements. Here we see the second Physical period, but this time it is under Mars as the period ruler, instead of the Moon as in the first Physical-Earth period. Mars being the planet of action, this is the time of life when we put into definite action the sum of our first cycle of the four elements: physical, vital, emotional and mental. Whatever Mars signifies in the individual horoscope is powerfully expressed. We are likely to meet and deal with people who are dominated by Mars or whose strong horoscope positions fall in conjunction with our position of Mars. This is true of all the periods: we attract those who vibrate to our planet that is ruler or sub-ruler at the time. Very often these two planets will describe the nature of the attraction and motive for marriage at the time, or for any other outstanding human relationship between two or more people.

The sixth 7-year period, from birthday 35 to birthday 42, is under Jupiter and is of the Water-Vital element. This is the period of philosophic growth, when we grasp, perhaps for the first time, the inner significance of the symbols life holds for us. We may not call it philosophy, but that's what it is; our purposes rise to the surface, we formulate and become keenly conscious of our code of living, we appreciate religious truth more deeply, our horizon widens, either through travel or study, for these are the province of Jupiter. We do these things in our own individual way, of course, according to what Jupiter signifies in our own nativity.

The seventh 7-year period, from 42nd to 49th birthdays, is dominated by the Fire-

The War in Terms of Psychic Stress

by Manly Palmer Hall

Vibration is life. Vibration is a kind of inward motion which flows from the internal parts of all organisms in an outwardly direction towards the circumference of these organisms. Nor does the vibration end at the extremities of formal structures. It radiates out from the circumference of bodies to become what the ancients called "the magnetic field," or aura. In terms of vibration, therefore, all living creatures are centers of living energy which radiates from them as light or heat radiates from a flame.

Vibration exists in an infinite number of conditions, which result from modifications of the rate or intensity of the vibration. The basic difference between a cosmic sun and a grain of sand is a matter of vibratory intensity. All things vibrate and all so-called inert matter is made up of minute vibratory vortices. Vibration is modified by two primary factors. The first is the quantitative intensity of the vibration itself and the second is the density of the medium through which the vibratory rays pass. This may be called resistance. To use the analogy of light, we may say that the extent of its luminosity depends upon the power of the flame itself, in the first place, and the condition of the atmosphere in the second place. A powerful light is visible to a greater distance than a feeble light, and either is reduced in terms of visibility on a foggy night.

Pure vibration was denominated by the ancients BEING—the basic fact of existence itself, the source and substance of beings. The mystics have named this pure vibratory essence GOD. And in the Chaldean Oracles it is called "The Ever Flowing Fountain of the REAL."

Pure vibration is beyond the estimating powers of the human being. He possesses no faculties capable of analyzing or examining its substance, nor can this unconditioned essence be discovered in the environment pattern of human experience. The wisest of the old philosophers, therefore, taught that BEING was knowable only through its three primary modes—consciousness, intelligence, and force. All trinitarian concepts of God are based upon the realization that pure life manifests through three basic conditions. These vast reservoirs of vibratory potential were called worlds, planes, or spheres, and in symbolism these worlds are described as the bodies of the Three-Blessed-Gods "In Whom we live, move and have our being."

So recondite is this subject that human knowledge has never yet solved the mystery of the three basic modes of energy. Consciousness is, but no man can say what it is. Intelligence exists and certain creatures participate in it, but the greatest intellectual cannot explain the mystery of his own intellect. Force is. All physical substances are subject to the motions of irresistible forces, but not even the ablest physicist can give an adequate definition of force. Man is reduced to the pragmatic solution to his problem. He tries to explain what an energy is by describing what that energy does.

An old axiom says: "After the One, the Three; and after the Three, the multitude." Within the three great vibratory fields which make up the created universe, an inconceivable differentiation takes place. Energy, striking resistance, that is, meeting obstacle in the form of conflicting energy, manifests as an infinite diversity of impulses. Each of these impulses creates bodies or form symbols of itself. In the world of consciousness these energy complexes are called spirits. In the world of intelligence these energy complexes are called thoughts, and in the world of force these energy complexes are called bodies. Of spirits man knows but little. Of thoughts he has a greater but still uncertain knowledge. But of forms he has a more adequate comprehension. He realizes that all visible structures from the atom to the sun are vibratory forms, each in its own way bearing witness to some modification of the one basic formal energy. This is the substance of the Platonic doctrine of forms and a key to the Platonic theology of the cosmic order.

Universal vibration, moving through the organism of the human being, himself a complex of cosmic energies, manifests as a triad of intelligence, emotion, and action. The human personality is the basic environment through which these energies must pass into manifestation. It naturally follows that the condition of the personality will, therefore, modify the intensity of the manifesting vibration. This explains the mystery of evolution. Organic quality is being continually modified by experience factors. This process is termed unfoldment or growth. This growth gradually brings about refinement of structure, that is, increases the vibratory rates of the body substances themselves. As a consequence, the internal energy moves more adequately through the refined structure. This greater release of internal potential is the basis of the difference between the primitive creature and the great artist, musician, or philosopher.

The mental, emotional, and physical codes and standards by which a person lives, by a strange kind of cosmic chemistry, are compounded into a personality pattern and this compound pattern becomes the vehicle of his inner life. Thus his own thinking becomes the vehicle for the thought energy moving through him. His own feelings determine the emotional energy which will radiate from him. And his own standard of physical action establishes the normalcy or abnormalcy of his corporeal constitution.

Space is full of vibration. It is a sea of moving forces, ever changing. In the depths of this ocean of living waters men exist as little units of life in the midst of an immense area of life. Examined in terms of vibration these little human complexes are like tiny stars, pulsing in a universal sky.

Nature is eternally defending itself against excess of stimulation. Stimulation is nothing more or less than an increasing rate of vibration. If over-stimulation occurs, the vibration becomes too high for the medium or body through which it is released and the result is stress and destruction. Man at this stage of his development is insulated by his personality complex and does not respond directly to vibratory rates injurious to his psychic chemistry. It is possible, however, in various ways to become sensitive to vibrations which the organisms cannot reasonably interpret. The result is confusion within the complex itself.

The human being is not only a recipient of vibration. To be alive means to be a center of vibration and all living things exercise some vibratory influence over their environment. It thus appears that each of us is part of the environment of other things. The energy which flows from us influences the evolution of plants, animals, and minerals. To these other lives we are like planets. The human family is a constellation in space, exerting profound effect over other evolving lives. By analogy, human beings affect not only other orders of living but their own as well, and each human being is a vibratory factor in the development of other human beings. Humanity itself is a rate of vibration. And each of the persons that make it up is a modification of that rate.

Thought and emotion are themselves vibratory rates, exercising immense environmental force. The thoughts and feelings of one person may extend to those near him and modify their lives. The thoughts and feelings of great numbers of persons united in some common attitude become sufficiently potent to effect the entire magnetic field of the human race. Thus from generals we descend to the particulars of our present purpose, namely, to indicate the vibratory effect of the present war upon the sensitive psychical organism of human beings.

At the present time the greater part of the human race is engaged in a struggle for survival. This is not merely a mechanical fact, it is a mental, emotional, and physical struggle, in which attitudes and convictions play the dominant part. Each of these attitudes and convictions is basically a vibration, and its vibratory intensity is built up by the number of persons who hold a specific conviction. In addition to these large ideological factors there are many other vibratory intensities being stimulated by the present course of events. Immense vibratory reservoirs of hate, pain, sorrow, despair, and similar tensions are accumulating force with the passing hours. These tensions create great geometrical patterns of energy. Plotinus called them "effulgent blossoms in space." The energy pouring from these complexes becomes part of the environment of all living creatures, and is especially severe in its effect upon mankind because they are attuned to the basic modes from which these complexes derive their power.

A simple example of this war is nerves. Ripples of nerve tension are constantly striking against the aura of the pineal gland of the human brain. If the human being himself is naturally inclined to tension, this is revealed in the vibrations of this gland. The similarity between the vibratory tendencies of the person and the vibratory intensity of the world chaos results in a kind of sympathy. This similarity is an open door which permits the outside chaos to flow into the nervous system of the individual. He then develops a fine case of jitters. He does not know exactly what is wrong, but he is nervous, excitable, or irritable. If the vibratory pattern strikes his emotional structure, then he feels low, depressed, and shows melancholy symptoms. If it affects primarily his physical structure, there is devitalization, exhaustion, palpitation, bad digestion, headaches, and innumerable other symptoms.

The exhaustion caused by international tension has had much to do with the present development of vitamin therapy. Vitamins are special preparations which capture the essential vitality vibration from various food products. They are the physical answer to the depletion caused by mental and emotional tension. Even the vitamin, however, cannot completely meet the challenge. Many people feel that vitamins have become necessary because of the over-refinement and adulteration of food products. This is unquestionably true in part, but there is another factor: the human being is demanding more vitality support than ever before in history. And as time passes and vibrations continue to become more subtle, the need for vitamin support will increase. Vitamin therapy is pointing the way to an entirely new theory of nutrition. Man is changing within himself and in time this change must effect every habit of his outer life.

The Yezidi of Iraq have a peculiar doctrine concerning the vibratory power of destruction. The Yezidi are a strange sect of devil-worshippers. Although the cult was broken up centuries ago, small communities of believers still exist in the less accessible area of Persia and other near Eastern countries. The Yezidi taught that the evil thoughts, and deeds of men created an invisible planet which moves in an orbit about the earth. They call this planet the Dark Star and worship it as the abode of the demon hierarchy of the Diamond Peacock.

The esoteric doctrine of the Yezidi explains that the Dark Star is nourished by the discords of men. These vibrations rising up through the earth's subtle atmosphere reached the orbit of the invisible world. And here they are gathered up to become a constant source of further corruption. It is possible that their belief did not originate in the speculations of the early Yezidi but may be traced to much older systems of occult philosophy. For example: Pythagoras taught the existence of an invisible planet within the orbit of the moon and the Cabalists have a curious account of a demon world which they named the planet Lilit, which is described by them as the infernal wife of Adam prior to the creation of Eve.

It is axiomatic that confusion has its own form. Negative vibrations brought into being by the struggle of the nations are not dissipated into empty space. They endure and do move about the earth, sustained from age to age by the energies flowing from the fountains of hate and dissension. Christian mystics have referred to these vibrations and the great vortex into which they flow as the sin body of the earth. The Gnostics taught that it was this sin body which would be overcome by the Sotar or Messiah. This is the Dragon of the astral light that must be slain by St. George. This is also the Black Dragon of the Orient (Black Dragon Society of Japan). This is also the dragon of Atlantean sorcery which destroyed the old world and still hovers menacingly in the psychic atmosphere of the earth.

Each human being is a center from which conditioned energy is constantly pouring to nourish either good or bad. When, as the result of enlightened living and thinking, the individual contributes to the positive progress of humanity, the power of negative vibration decreases; conversely, when he permits himself to dwell in negative and critical moods, he sends forth demon creatures to battle against the forces of light.

Criticism, hate, greed, and all negative conditions of energy effect primarily the organism which creates them. Destructive living destroys the one who practices it. He sets up a rate of vibration which attunes him with the ray of the Dark Star. He offers himself as a channel for the hosts of Yerlik, Regent of Evil, Prince of the Diamond Peacock.

In the old teachings, therefore, it is taught as an absolute law that men are destroyed not by their times but by themselves. In spite of the evils that exist about them, each man is secure until he himself participates in those evils. Each in his own way must make his pact with Satan and sign it with his own blood. He makes this pact by becoming like the evil in his world. His affirmations of virtue, his excuses and apologies for his action, and his wail that he is tempted beyond his endurance—these evasions avail nothing. It is a law of vibration that like attracts like and we share in all modes of energy similar to the modes which we ourselves engender. It is in this very way that the great law of cause and effect operates. The workings of natural law in the human sphere of action are all determined by vibratory sympathies. It is, therefore, most important at this time to live and to think and to feel as normally and constructively as possible. If we keep our values straight and never even for a moment permit ourselves to fall into negative ways of reacting to external stimulus, we can and will preserve not only our own integrity but strengthen the constructive vibration which must ultimately bring us out of the present evil.

The beginning of personal security is to discover the zone of quietude within ourselves. Deep beneath the confusion of personality there is a calmness in the source of things. We must find this calmness and identify ourselves with the poise and integrity which abide there. By fulfilling the ancient axiom "Be Still and Know," we attune ourselves to the noblest of our vibratory modes. It is not easy to accomplish this in the presence of the heckling factors of daily living. Worries and doubts upset our tranquility, and we lose this kinship with our inner selves. This we must realize, however, only through this identification with our own higher selves can we discover security in time of stress. It is not peace in the world that brings us contentment but peace in ourselves through which we share in the constructive vibrations of the Cosmos. We have already learned that fortunate times do not result in personal happiness. When there are no wars in the world, we create small conflicts in our own environment. World security becomes the opportunity for individuals to be more and more selfish with a sense of immunity from consequences. We all long for better times so that we can gather in comradeship and seek happiness each in his own way. Yet we have had such times, but we have not sought happiness in a direction where we could ever hope to find it. We have gathered and our gatherings have ended in squabbles, in hatreds. We have sought happiness and our prisons, asylums, hospitals, and institutions for the indigent are monuments to this endeavor. The individual who waits for his world to get better so that he can do the things he wants to do is very foolish, indeed. He will keep on waiting till the doomsday battle and when it rains he will be as miserable as he is today. We are all waiting for others to get better so that we can enjoy their improvement. We are waiting for dictators to die; nations to be reorganized; races to evolve sweet tempers; and our local politicians to improve. When all the problems of living have been removed and our every wish, be it ever so fantastic, has been fulfilled, and all the wounds of private and public strife have been bound up, then, and then only, will we have good dispositions, for the simple reason that nothing will remain to try our patience or test our sanity.

Obviously, such thinking is foolish, but it is a foolishness we all share in some degree. The old philosophies teach us to do it differently. If the individual corrects the intemperances of himself, he will discover the reason for things as they are. He will see the justice in that which he most dislikes and the wisdom behind the causes of his own acute discomfort. Again, it is vibration. We are aware of what we are like. While we dwell in personal confusion, we see about us nothing but confusion and are overwhelmed by it. When we have ordered our inward living, our vision changes. We perceive order

The Astrology of Literary Success

by Blanca Holmes

Time and again, charts are written up and published in astrological magazines and the astrologer in all good faith has taken the birth data out of WHO'S WHO, or been given information about a well known person from a relative, some close friend or through some other rather doubtful source.

In the case of actors and actresses this mode of procedure proves fatal in nine times out of ten, for seldom if ever will you find correct data, especially about the year of birth given out by professional people. The town where an actor has been raised, has grown up and is known, is often given instead of the correct place of his birth from where he moved away shortly afterwards. All this is leading up to the fact that concerning the four charts discussed here (while not of the theatre) the data was given to the writer personally, so you can rely on the facts being correct.

If you have the desire to write but have been discouraged because some of the old astrological rules laid down for writers do not apply in your case, take courage; for here we have four well-known and successful writers, who, while they have some of the aspects and planet positions deemed necessary for success as a writer, have not all of them.

Ladies first! Let us start with Faith Baldwin, the prominent novelist. She was born October 1, 1893, at 8 am, in New Rochelle, New York. She looks so very young that it is difficult to believe this is her correct data.

The first thing we notice in her chart is Sagittarius on the cusp of her second. Second house rules money; Sagittarius rules publishing. The ruler of her 2nd, Jupiter, is in the writers' sign, Gemini, in the 8th; and her Moon is also in Gemini. She is a most prolific writer; a hard worker. Scorpio on the ascendant may account for this. Notice that her 12th house is well tenanted and she writes continually about hospitals, doctors and nurses (the 12th being the house of confinement). Mercury and Saturn are conjunct in this house—Saturn in its exaltation.

The conjunction of Mercury and Saturn attest to the depth of her mind, shows she is given to research, that she deals with facts, and very seldom, if ever, writes about a place unless she has been there personally. The conjunction is the personal aspect.

Her planets in Gemini help her to write in a light, apparently careless and more or less free style which pleases the magazine reading public of today. People want to pick up a book and lose themselves in it for the time being, getting away from their own problems.

Miss Baldwin's writings have a strong flavor of romanticism, the Sun ruler of her 10th (profession) being in the Venus sign Libra. Two other of her planets are in Libra; and Venus itself is rising in her 1st house.

Mars, ruler of her 6th (work) is in Virgo, the sign that rules detail, writings, words; and it conjoins her Sun which is, as stated above, the ruler of her occupational 10th. Her Part of Fortune is found in the 9th (publishing); is trine to Venus. Its square to Mercury and Saturn give experience, the material of literature.

Those planets of hers in Gemini (having rulership over relatives) has given her some family and relative responsibilities, which may have instigated her from the beginning to work and make money not only for herself but to help others. Neptune, ruler of her 5th (children) is in Gemini, sign of twins, and she is the mother of twins.

Often in writers' charts, the old books tell us, there should be some strong good aspect between Venus and Mercury conferring expression ability, as well as aspects between Mars and Mercury, preferably good ones. Miss Baldwin has a semi-sextile between Venus and Mercury and no outstanding aspect between Mercury and Mars—yet she has the faculty of putting her points over in a simple and entertaining way, holding your interest, never being too involved or tiring you, giving the feeling of enjoyment in what you have just read. Seven of her nine planets are in positive signs, adding to her capacity as a business woman; no doubt she gets paid well for what she writes. These positive positions also keep her from being "pushed around", you may be sure.

Students looking at this chart will wonder just how the eclipse of October 1, 1940, affected her. The Sun, while it indicates one's physical body, to a greater extent, in her case rules the 10th; yet it was a health problem which necessitated surgery, that slowed up and interfered with her work for a time.

The trine aspect of Jupiter (ruler of her second) to the Sun, ruler of her occupational 10th, accounts for the success she has attained in the literary field.

Uranus, exalted in Scorpio, rising, makes her original and inventive, endowing her with a wealth of ideas; helps her to get situations quickly and makes it unnecessary for her to rehash plots, or do over things. In her writings you get a definite fresh time effect; there is no warmed over flavor.

The writer has never met Miss Baldwin personally. She wrote two years ago and ordered a 1941 forecast; also one for 1942 and '43. We have become good friends through the mail and scarcely a week passes when there isn't a very bright and entertaining, and welcome, letter from her.

Advanced students will see readily that she is a developed soul.

Sydney Skolsky is a well-known newspaper columnist. His column is syndicated in many papers, though he has also written stories for magazines, sold them to the picture studios, and has worked as a writer at several of the studios.

Sydney was born May 2, 1905, in New York City at 3 pm. Gemini (the writers' sign) is on the cusp of his occupational 10th house; he also has the other mercurial sign rising—Virgo. Sydney is shrewd, a very gifted writer with four planets in Earth signs and an Earth sign rising. He has written many interesting columns about Hollywood, mostly for those in the know; but no matter who you are or where you live, when you read Skolsky's column, you understand just what is going on, and do not have to be "in the know".

His 8th house, you will see, is very heavily tenanted, giving him the coloring of Scorpio, the 8th sign, both in personality and looks. He is very difficult to fool, simply cannot tolerate a phony; when he walks into a room he can size up at a glance the books on a shelf. You know instinctively: here is a man with whom I have to be myself; no bag of tricks goes here.

The Moon having strong rulership over the 10th (Cancer is intercepted) gives him his appeal to the masses.

While writings have brought him a considerable amount of fame and money, it is this writer's contention that Sydney Skolsky will eventually enter films as a producer. One reason: Venus rules his 2nd and the set-up of planets in Taurus in the 8th house (other people's money) shows he has a sense of values; another is that he could cash in on his experience in writing, knowing story values as he does.

Neptune (exalted) is in his 10th, as we find it placed in the charts of many people who work for or in the films, and it rules his 6th (work). He has Mercury conjunct Venus which verifies the old rules for gift as a writer. He was born with it.

His strong interest in the working man, in the masses, comes from his Virgo ascendant.

Students studying this chart will realize what an able chap he is, somewhat difficult to know; but once he gives friendship, he proves to be a wonderful and understanding friend, for his Sun rules his 11th, the house of friends.

Clifford Odets is another well-known writer, identified chiefly with the theatre as a playwright. He wrote the highly successful play "Golden Boy" which was later made into a picture.

You will notice he has the same degree of Scorpio rising as Faith Baldwin. The ruler of his 2nd house (money), Jupiter, is in the 8th, in Gemini, just as in Miss Baldwin's chart. They both have the Moon in Gemini, also, just one degree apart. So Mr. Odets, too, has some family responsibilities or relatives whom he may help along. The Moon conjunct Jupiter in the writers' sign guarantees him popularity. Mercury in the 10th (Semi-sextilite to Mars) indicates that some type of writing would be in his profession. Venus in the 10th would also give us the impression that he would be connected with the arts, the theatre. Venus is in Virgo, sign of the masses. This position and the fact that Scorpio is rising, flavors his work, his dramas, with a message carried especially for the worker. Scorpio rising: he would expose existing conditions in hope that they might be rebuilt anew.

You notice he has three planets in the sensitive sign Cancer in his 9th house; and as we all know the 9th house rules foreign affairs. Mr. Odets does quite a bit of translating of Russian plays and stories into English.

Advanced students will see at a glance that this chart has a touch of genius that is talked so much about in Hollywood, but is seldom really found.

The planet Uranus in his 3rd (house of the mind) trine to Venus but opposing Neptune, shows he has none of the herd instinct. Indeed, he stands alone in many of his ideas; they are often too advanced for the average person. With all but two planets above the horizon, naturally he has been heard from.

In manner, he is rather diffident and charming. He came to have his horoscope read October 13, 1942. He has an open mind about everything: a very erudite person,

Hitler's Key Cycles - and yours

by Florence Erylinn Campbell

Just what does a "key" Cycle mean?

If you are a Wynn reader you should know by now—for you have found it to be an "unlocking" factor in countless charts for many years, in fact, as far back as 1936, when it was explained in the November issue of Wynn's magazine and opened up the kind of a door you could look through and discover what would be lying in wait for you at any given spot in the world, at any time of your own choosing. That's about all the revelation we need (or have the right to ask for) when making the application to our own charts or to any others with which we are dealing. If you haven't yet made first-hand acquaintance with this key to your major cycles, we advise you to start today; tomorrow might land you in circumstances you would like to profit by.

The process is a simple one. All you need to know is (1) your exact time of birth; (2) how to set up your Solar Return on your birthday and (3) how to count, from that Return, to the date and place desired. For step No. 3, arm yourself with Wynn's Increment Tables and save yourself a lot of time.

We are here selecting a few of the high spots in Hitler's Key Cycles because we are all painfully familiar with the advantage he has taken of his openings. You can take the high spots of your own life—past or to come—and check up by your Key Cycle of accounting.

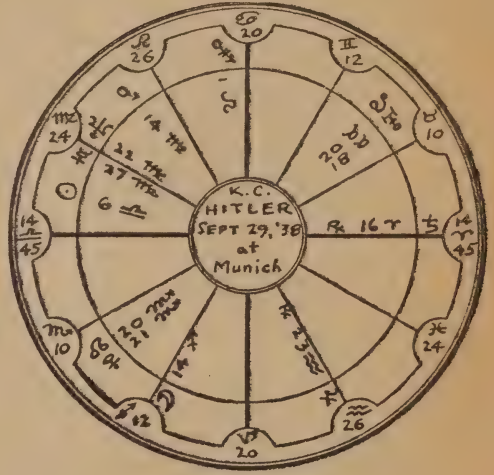

No student of astrology will ever lose an opportunity to discover some additional Why or What that relates to himself or his actions nor will he overlook any competent guide for his future—as far as he is able to regulate it. The Key Cycle will take you as far ahead as you choose to go, but I suggest that you make it a matter of weeks or months rather than of years—for in these hair-trigger days we are more subject than usual to the turn of cosmic events and only the inspired seer who knows exactly which way the Cosmic Cat will jump can tell you how its landing will affect your personal life. By a most merciful dispensation of Providence it is not granted to man to see too far ahead—but by a dispensation of man—the Key Cycle—we can know what we are headed for.

The story of Hitler's life needs no repetition—nor are we here concerned with his family background or the intricate statement of his natal chart. We are hunting down a few of the KEY Cycles which have affected the Hitler we know and which helped to condition him even before he had astrology to show him the "best" times for the worst deeds.

According to his Solar Return for 1918, it could be plainly seen that this was to be a key year in his life. Both he and the world at large have been suffering its repercussions to this day. That was the year he was wounded in battle for the second time—now seriously, blinded and gassed—and hospitalized at Paesewalk. The Key Cycle for that hospitalization is important for two main reasons: first, it is a picture of unadulterated chaos and a psychological transformation that caused him to emerge a megalomaniac instead of the inhibited and defeated psychopath he had been hitherto; secondly—it was so evidently a testimony of death, we must conclude that there was some tremendous reason for his preservation.

Pluto, Jupiter and Neptune are in the 8th (death), with Neptune ruling the 4th (outcome) and opposing the Moon (health), which rules the 8th—a Moon that was in close application to the S. Node of Neptune (11° Aquarius). Venus, Mercury and the Sun are in the 10th, Mercury ruling the 10th and conjunct his natal Uranus. Mars, ruling the 12th (hospitals) is posited in the 1st, opposing his natal Pluto. Uranus is in its own sign in the 3rd and ruling it, trine the Sun and opposing the KC Saturn. There was every reason to expect that the world would be rid of him—except for Neptune, which had the last word. It stood in that 8th house as sentinel between the radical mid-heaven and 10th house Saturn—and it ruled the "End of the Matter". It has, indeed!

On February 24th, 1920, the Nazi Party was born—but according to Heiden (see his HISTORY OF NATIONAL SOCIALISM, it uttered its first Hitlerian cry at the Beer Hall Putsch on November 9th, 1923. We all recall that this was the "failure" that sent Hitler to jail—which furnished the occasion for MEIN KAMPF—which declared the Plan in words of one syllable—which became the target for ridicule, then amazement, then terror—which made its author a potential tool of the overlords and their subsequent czar—which shook a decadent world out of a long sleep—which brings us down to today. A veritable House that Jack Built from a brawl in a beer hall.

In the KC chart Uranus rules the ascendant, rising in the 1st, conjunct the South Node (the point of "self-undoing"), trine Pluto and the 8th house Sun and Mercury; Saturn, ruler of the 12th (jail) conjuncts Mars in the 8th—and Saturn sits on his natal ascendant. Plenty of blood will be spilled (Mars), plenty of deaths will occur (8th house) and the 12th-house ruler, overshadowing the ascendant of the chief performer, promises a sojourn under lock and key. But Jupiter rules the KC 10th and

Mercury, conjunct the Sun, rules the outcome (4th) and the "self-expression" (5th) that produced the desired martyrdom and the literary fame that transformed an inconsequential corporal into the breaker of the Reichswehr.

This is one of the best examples on record of the desirability of going all the way with the Key Cycle. With Uranus and S. Node in the 1st (precipitation and false moves) and an 8th-house Saturn ruling the 12th (jail), we might be inclined to advise a postponement of any revolutionary move—but if we look far enough ahead, past the inconvenience of the moment, we see the assurance of spectacular success.

If one were foolish enough to want to rise to power through deceit and double-dealing, he should see that Neptune rules the midheaven of his Key Cycle; if he wanted to fool the people with fair words and rosy promises (which he has no intention of carrying out), let him have Venus in the 7th—the house of Dealing with Others—but let Saturn be the ruler of the house; if he would pose as the Father-Mother of the people, Cancer is the best ascendant he could select and it is an excellent idea to have Pluto in the 1st house to help with the gangster methods he intends to use. Such was the set-up on January 30th, 1933, when Hitler was made Chancellor of the Reich and such the map of his rise to power.

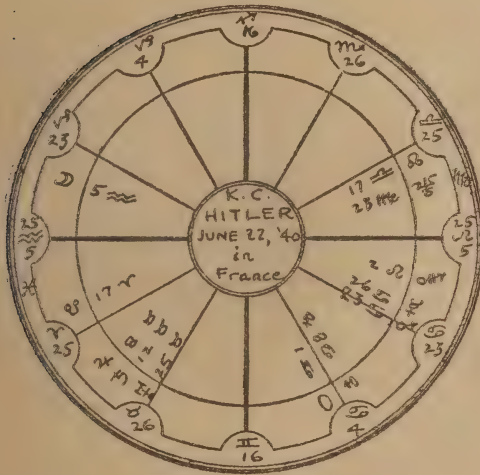

The ruler of the M.C. (Neptune) was in the 4th—the Fatherland—and retrograde; the Moon, ruler of the 1st and 2nd, was in the 10th, declaring the "people's choice" of the one who had insisted that they were the Government; the 8th house Mercury, ruler of the 4th and 12th, revealed the ultimate plan—death (8th) or imprisonment (12th) for all who should stand in the way—and if there were any doubt of it, all we need to do is to look at the conjunction of that Mercury to Saturn, ruler of the 8th and 7th. Venus sits alone in the 7th, apparently friendly and harmless—but she is in close square to the 11th-house Uranus and in close opposition to the 1st-house Pluto. It is as pretty a picture as one could desire for "fooling all of the people all of the time"—for a time.

Just when Hitler began to be guided by his astrologers is not definitely known (at least to us) but history records that astrology was made a government department in 1935 and events soon proved that no major move was made without a careful planning that would bring the helpful forces to the vital spots—and thus assure success. There is a long list of KC evidence of this guidance—the Purge, the murder of Dollfuss, the Rome-Berlin Axis (and Mussolini's charted successes in Abyssinia), the occupation of the Rhineland, the Austrian Anschluss—and countless others down the line to the rape of Czechoslovakia, not forgetting the cleverly planned speeches in preparation for it, on the heels of the Munich "Peace" Pact—which was deliberately delayed until the psychological moment.

The signing of the Pact was a KC masterpiece—held up until 30 minutes past midnight, after continued stalling throughout the day of the 28th (September, 1938). The Moon, in Jupiter's sign, is in the 3rd (papers and documents) and rules the midheaven; Saturn, the paralyzer, is in the 7th—which is ruled by the 11th-house Mars, which also takes charge of the coveted possessions (2nd); the Moon squares Mars (war) and is son to square Neptune (lies), ruler of the army and "subordinates." Gas (Neptune) was freely used in Czechoslovakia. The 7th-house Saturn rules the 4th (the People and the End) and Hitler's own Saturn is in the 10th, while his natal ascendant and Uranus are in the 1st (springing surprises); his Mars-Venus is in the 8th, the latter conjuncted by the KC Uranus. It was a well-timed birth chart of ruthless domination, cruelty and suppression and a clear testimony (Moon square Neptune) of a speedy repudiation of the terms of the pact.

A fitting companion-piece to Munich is the "Non-Aggression Pact with Russia," with Neptune, ruler of the 3rd (more "papers") posited in the 9th (foreign affairs) at the apex of a grand trine—Neptune-Mars-Uranus (9th, 2nd, 5th). Russia was needed to push the plans against Poland, lest she be cajoled into an alliance with France and Britain. The treaty was signed August 24th, 1939, with Jupiter, ruler of the chart, in orb of the 4th cusp; the Moon, ruler of the 8th, in the 1st (in Saturn's sign) and Venus, from the 8th, ruling the M.C. and the 5th (colonies). Mercury, also in the 8th, rules the 7th and 9th. It was intended to be only a paper agreement—but its purpose was secured for definiteness, for Mercury had been retrograde and von Ribbentrop timed the signing for the very day on which it turned direct. It was to last only as long as it suited Germany (Mars ruler of the 4th)—but it was to hold while it lasted. Saturn was backing up to a conjunction with Hitler's natal Sun and the 8th-house Pluto was transiting his 10th—so despite the apparent one-sidedness of the advantage, there were indications of trouble ahead—which had to be disregarded in the need of the moment. Any Russian astrologer could have seen that here were no honorable intentions and that there would be but a short step to the beginning of World War II.

Hitler's Key Cycle for September 1st, 1939 bears many resemblances to the KC treaty with Russia. The horary chart of the invasion of Poland (not illustrated here) is inherently weak and unstable, with Neptune, ruler of the 7th, rising in the 1st, showing the confusion among the people and the unbridled dreams of their leader, and Uranus, ruler of the 6th, in the 9th, playing havoc with all foreign negotiations and dealings. The Key Cycle chart has Neptune in the 9th, as in the Russian agreement, still heading the trine to Mars and Uranus, but now Sun and Venus, rulers of the 8th, 10th and 5th, have moved into the 9th and Jupiter, ruler of the 1st (still in the 4th), has a conjunction with the Moon instead of a square. Pleasing and helpful, to say the least. Hitler

A Curious War Bond

Astrological Symbols in the Revolution

One of the December features on the Pacific Coast was an exhibit of documents, money and bonds of the American Revolution, at the Huntington Library in San Marino (near Los Angeles). This exhibit showed many direct parallels with the present: war bonds, food shortages, fear of inflation, a farm bloc, warnings against counterfeit money, regulations for restaurants, sugar shortage and other similarities with our day so familiar that only the written and printed names of leading citizens and the peculiar old-style type on the yellowing paper reminded one that they were the molding records of a bygone day.

Astrologically, this is not surprising, for Neptune was then in the same position as today, and so was Uranus, the first in our governmental 10th and the second in our war 7th—then as now. Also, Jupiter was in Cancer, as it is today. Jupiter is the ruling planet of our national horoscope.

Neptune is the ruler of our national 4th house, representing lands and assets of the nation, all of which were pledged with the personal honor of our courageous forefathers to see the Revolution through to its successful conclusion (the 4th is also the end of the matter). Yet Neptune is traditionally the patron of doubts, fears and plans not too well made, ends not clearly seen except in their idealism.

It is well known that Benjamin Franklin was an excellent astrologer—witness his numerous predictions concerning the qualities of days to come in his POOR RICHARD'S ALMANAC. The name "Poor Richard" was taken from the name of Richard Saunders, a well-known astrologer at that time. That old ALMANAC, so far as is known, was this nation's first astrology magazine and must have had many readers conversant with the subject.

It is therefore not as surprising as at first it might seem to find in the Huntington Library exhibit a war bond of 1779 with the signs of the Zodiac, the symbols of the planets and aspects made into two sides of its border.

This old bond, reproduced herewith, was issued by the State of Massachusetts-Bay and offered to pay the bearer "Forty Pounds upon the 2nd day of December, 1779, with Interest at Six per Cent. per Annum; the Interest to be paid Annually." It is a pleasant commentary that 1943 war bonds do not have to make so strong an appeal to the investment sense—we are a little more sure of the U. S. Government's promise now than purchasers of bonds were in those uncertain times.

If you will examine closely, you will see near the large capital F the symbols of Pisces, Gemini and the square. That these were put in at random may be the case, as some non-astrologers believe (they take the view that the symbols were used to make the bond less easy to counterfeit); but these are the first signs used on the left and top, where reading begins, and they are the signs on America's 4th (assets) and 7th (war), and they are in square aspect to each other!

Scorpio is the next sign, immediately following the square, and is the sign ruling the U. S. 12th, our house of confidential arrangements—the Declaration was made behind closed doors. Scorpio is also one of the signs of Mars, planet of direct action. A little below this is the Sun, occupant of our national 8th (a house of Mars) and ruler of our idealistic 9th. Yet further down the left hand border appears Mercury, ruler of our war 7th.

All of this may be purely accidental, but it also may be significantly supposed to reveal the astrological foundations of our nation. One of the strange things about it all is that apparently there is no Saturn to be found, although there are numerous Mercurys (our war ruler), another Sun and at least one Mars. Aries, the other Mars sign, is particularly prominent with at least a dozen repetitions of its symbol. Sagittarius, our national ascendant, is seen in the bottom line; and Gemini, the sign holding our Mars is again shown in the lower right hand corner, with the Sun. Every sign of the Zodiac is represented at least once, and those so inclined may find something significant in the number of times each one is repeated.

As to Jupiter, our ruling planet, while the type is blurred, there seems to be one just to the left of the heavy vertical stroke of the pen in the lower right hand corner.

At any rate, this shows the public was sufficiently interested in astrology in those days to make it worth a printer's while to have the symbols of it on hand.

The Story of an Old Prophecy

The following prophecy is herewith reprinted from a rare book entitled "A Manual of Astrology, or The Book of the Stars," by the first Raphael, printed in London in 1828.

"Antiochus Tibertus was one of the most famous astrologers of the fifteenth century; and although his death was very unhappy, yet his singular predictions render his name immortal.

"He was a native of a town in Romagna; a certain officer carried him to Paris where he studied; and where, following the bent of his genius, he applied himself to the occult sciences, or rather to all the branches of that secret and curious art, called natural magic.

"Considering in his own mind that this science had been decryd from its having been mostly in the hands of bold, ignorant and profligate persons, he thought to restore it to its former credit and repute by giving it all the advantages that could possibly be derived from mathematics, natural philosophy, history, and the fine arts, of which he was a perfect master. The pains he took in this respect were attended with rather more success than he anticipated; so much indeed, that before he quitted France, he had attained a very high reputation, and was considered as the cleverest astrologer of the day.

"Upon his return to his native country, where that sort of knowledge was in the highest repute, he found it necessary for his own security, to ingratiate himself with some of the petty tyrants or little princes that were possessed of the several cities and territories in Italy. Nor was it long before he gained the confidence of Pandolfo Malatesta, at that time sovereign of Remini; with whom he lived in the greatest ease and credit. His reputation was quickly raised to such a height (as well by the curious books he published, as by the happy verification of many of his predictions) that his house was continually thronged either with visitors who were persons of distinction, or clients who came to him for advice; so that in a short time he amassed a competent fortune; and as he was esteemed, courted, and beloved by persons of the highest rank, he might, according to appearances, have promised himself a comfortable journey through life and a peaceful passage out of it in old age. But fate (to whose decrees Antiochus Tibertus was no stranger) had, it seemed, willed otherwise. In a word, he has established his fame to posterity by three incontestible predictions; one with respect to his most intimate friend; another in regard to himself; and the third relating to his patron the prince. Each of them wholly improbable at the time they were delivered; all of them inscrutable, by the rules of human policy or prudence; and yet all exactly accomplished.

"This friend of his was Guido de Bogni, one of the greatest captains of his time, as well as one of the bravest and boldest men that ever lived. He was very earnest with Tibertus to reveal to him the secret of his destiny. After considerable reluctance, this great master of his art declared that Guido would certainly lose his life by the hands of one of his best friends upon an ill grounded suspicion. Some time after this, Tibertus calculated his own nativity and made no scruple of declaring that himself was fated to lose his head upon the scaffold.

"Pandolfo, his patron, would likewise have his horoscope calculated, which Tibertus would willingly have declined; but finding it impossible, he would not hazard the credit of his art by telling a falsity; and therefore, although he was at that time the richest person in all Italy, Tibertus ventured to acquaint him, that after suffering great want, he would die in the common hospital at Bologna.

"Not long after this Guido was made commander-in-chief of the army of Pandolfo, the aforesaid prince, and patron of Tibertus, upon which the Count de Bentivoglio, who was father-in-law to that prince, wrote him a letter in which he assured him 'that he had made a shepherd of a wolf' and that Guido was certainly intriguing with the pope, and had promised to deliver up the city of Remini whenever he desired it. The tyrants of Italy were never men of much discernment, and therefore the prince Pandolfo, as soon as he had this information, made a great entertainment to which he invited all his favorites, and among the rest Guido and Tibertus the astrologer. At this supper Guido was stabbed (exactly as the former predicted) and as it was suspected that Tibertus, from his great intimacy with him, might have some share in the conspiracy, he was thrown into a dungeon and loaded with irons.

"It may easily be imagined that Tibertus passed his time very unpleasantly in this dismal situation, and therefore it will not be deemed surprising when it is stated that he endeavored to seize the first opportunity of escaping which offered. It seems the gaoler to whose care Tibertus was committed had a daughter of singularly mild and gentle manners, whom he at length persuaded to furnish him with the means of breaking out of his dungeon into the castle ditch, from whence he might easily escape.

"In the interim, Count Bentivoglio had discovered that the information he gave his relation was ill founded; and of this he sent him an account, as soon as it was in his power; at which news Pandolfo was infinitely affected and grieved at his rash and cruel measures.

"It was however impossible to recall his unfortunate general Guido from the grave; but he gave instant orders that Tibertus should be set at liberty. The persons who brought these orders came just at the fall of night, and strange to say, precisely at the time the astrologer had forced his way into the ditch, where after a slight search they found him.

"When this was reported to the tyrant his former suspicions returned upon him with redoubled vigor; and recollecting at the same time the prediction of Tibertus, that he himself should be deprived of his patrimony before his death, he concluded that the first information could not be groundless; but that without doubt the astrologer must be concerned in some such pernicious design. To free himself therefore from these apprehensions, he gave orders that the next morning Tibertus should be beheaded before the prison gate; and thus the second prediction was verified in a manner equally strange, and out of the reach of human foresight to penetrate unassisted by the rules of art. Let us now proceed to the third prediction, which really took place not long after.

"It is to be observed that though the intelligence of the count proved false, with respect to the persons concerned, which very probably was the effects of his own suspicions, yet his information was right enough in the main; for a conspiracy was actually carrying on to place the city of Remini in the hands of the pope; and it was actually seized by the Duc de Valentinois not long after; but in the confusion which this occasioned, Pandolfo made his escape. He fled for some time from place to place, vigorously pursued by his enemies, and meeting (as is generally the case with tyrants) with very few friends; at length, after having endeavored to sow dissension among his own children, he was abandoned by them and every one else; inasmuch that, falling ill of a languishing disease at Bologna, where nobody cared to take him in, he was at last carried to the hospital, where he dragged out the remainder of his days in penury and pain, and at last died there, as the astrologer had foretold."

This old astrological text book was dedicated by the author to Sir Walter Scott "to which starry science himself, as the celebrated author of Waverly, etc., has so often referred in his matchless writings. . . . With the most exalted opinion of his unrivalled talents . . ." And the date follows: London, January 1st, 1828.

It's an Astrologer's Life!

Pages from a Diary

1st: At fairly regular intervals I have married clients who are either born into Cancer or Libra or have married such zodiacal mates. The usual reason for seeking help and advice from me is the problem of the offspring. Now Cancer and Libra have attitudes diametrically opposed in this matter: Cancer parents place the children first, and Libra parents place the mate first. And the result in time is the other parent seeking me. The mate of Cancer wants to know why the children have to be all important, and why he or she can't get a matrimonial look-in; and the mate of Libra wants me to explain why the children aren't more important and cared for. Sometimes, of course, it's the Cancer parent who comes to me to have me say why the other half doesn't understand that children should take first place; and sometimes it's the Libra parent who wants reassurance from me that the children are secondary in a marriage, and that the other half should concur.

It's interesting, revealing, and even amusing to take a look at the solar charts involved with this in mind. Take Cancer, first. Cancer on the Ascendant puts Capricorn on the 7th, and does that explain the attitude toward the mate! The mate is looked upon as useful (Saturn) and to be relied upon (Saturn), a necessary (Saturn) factor; but not just overwhelmingly engrossing or attractive. Whereas on the Cancer 5th is the sign Scorpio—and does that explain the attitude toward the children! An intensity that broods and hovers, that is intensely possessive and jealous of the child's other attachments; that wants to keep the child forever. Yet one that will itself last and go on giving love and loyalty for long. And Libra—put that sign on an Ascendant. You see Aries, the personal and youthful sign, on the 7th: and the attitude toward the mate is one that never stops being personal and has the happy ability to renew its youth periodically. Whereas on the Libran 5th is Aquarius—and the attitude toward the children does at times get censored by society as unconventional, doesn't it? In the sense of not featuring the accepted ideal of Mother Love with capitals.

Which doesn't imply any criticism on my part of either Librans or Cancerians: only those who didn't understand the missions of the zodiacal signs could criticize.

4th: Because of one factor that doesn't conform, I haven't been able to find the system back of it; but anyway here's "it." Our human relations, i.e., our relations with other human beings, come under the 11th, the 7th, the 3rd, and the 5th houses. And the 11th is ruled by a so-called "human sign", Aquarius, whose symbol includes the figure of a man. The 3rd is also ruled by a "human" sign, Gemini, symbolized by two human figures. The 7th likewise: the figure of a blindfolded woman holds a pair of scales. So far it is a system: the human signs rule the human relations—friends, those in our current environment, and our mates and equals. But alas I can't at this writing account for the 5th, our children, which isn't human but is the figure of a lion. (By the way, the 4th doesn't really rule human relations in the sense of mates and children; it primarily rules the home itself.)

7th: Speaking of clients, when those who don't understand astrology have been told something about their transits by some student, and know no more, it is quite difficult to explain to them how, at one and the same time, they can be having a square and a trine of the same major planet! I had a client yesterday who had just this: Neptune was in the sign square to her natal Sun, but by degree it was in exact trine. Personally, I believe because of the weight of my experience that the moment a major planet enters a sign everyone born in that sign, even at the very end of it, feels that planetary influence. I believe, for example, that Neptune's being in Libra has altered the essential nature of Libra as itself and has given it Neptunian coloring; so that anyone with a planet anywhere in Libra will feel it henceforth (until Neptune leaves) in a Neptunian fashion. I have seen so many, many instances of this.

10th: Did you ever notice how as people mature and grow elderly the sign that occupies their midheaven becomes more and more significant to them? The midheaven, of course, is our point of aspiration, what we are striving to achieve; and as the fires of youth and physical strength burn themselves out, our natural aspirations do tend to come out more visibly and consciously. This explains a great deal in charts whose Sun sign, Ascendant, and Moon sign are different from that on the midheaven.

12th: There are three things that can be done by anyone whose natal chart shows Uranus, Saturn, etc. on the 7th cusp or within. If it's Uranus in this position these choices include (one): marrying and eventually being divorced. (Two): marrying a divorced person. (Three): marrying an Aquarian or a person with Uranus dominating the chart. In the two latter cases the divorce indications are greatly lessened. If it's Saturn there, the native can (one): marry and endure discipline or unhappiness. (Two): marry a widowed person, or an older person. (Three): marry a Capricornian or one with Saturn dominating the horoscope. Again, the two latter choices lessen the general indications of a Saturn-seventh.

This, of course, is to leave out the other general possibilities: the nature of the marriage itself, which, if it is lived in accord with the higher meanings of the zodiacal signs, does not incur any of the harsh side of the same signs.

16th: My family owned a cat which required housebreaking when it came to us. It was particularly hard to train, and at the same time anxious to please. Eventually this resulted in the cat conceiving a brilliant idea of what was wanted; it would commit the error, put its own nose in it and then jump out of the window! A literal imitation of enforced habit, without understanding. I have thought about that cat, and hereby hope my Capricornian friends won't disown me forever if I retail my thoughts. Which are to this effect: Capricorn too is patient and really willing to please, and like the cat hates indignity. So after repeated discipline by life, many a Capricornian has symbolically jumped out of the window rather than wait to have it forced upon him; i.e., has denied himself rather than wait to be denied by life. It isn't always easy even for us humans to understand what life (divine law) wants us to learn, nor what is the mistake we are committing. Every sign, not Capricorn alone, shows a similar attitude.

18th: Looking into my mirror this morning made me think about the matter of karma. (No, it wasn't my own face that brought the matter up!) Every motion I made was of course in reverse. Now, thought I, we hear much about the "mirror of life" in occult studies, and the reason is obvious. But also there are many facets to the meaning. One is that if we hold the mirror of our own personal lives up to the fact of karma, we can clearly see the why of that karma: for the mirror reverses everything that happens to us and thus shows us the original causes of present effects.

20th: I have been gathering considerable astrological material from a friend I have made who owns a shop. This friend, having become interested in astrology, has taken to watching the moon every day in connection with sales. I have some recent reports which are interesting. My friend began on a day when the Moon was in Taurus. He noticed that he did rather well on these days; but it wasn't until the Moon changed into Gemini that a contrast struck him and he got in touch with me to point it out. "On the Taurus days," he told me, "they came and stayed; but when the Moon went into Gemini I couldn't keep them—they would come in and be out again in no time, whether they made a purchase or didn't. The difference between this quick motion and the easy dallying of the previous days was quite noticeable." I didn't hear from him for a couple of days more. Then he phoned me. "Say, I've got something that will interest you," he enthused. (Beginners are so enthusiastic, bless them.) "I made two big sales today, and I found out who and what the customers were when I had to make deliveries. You know the Moon is in Cancer. Well, believe it or not, the first customer is the chef at the H—— Hotel, and the other, the second, is in the office of F—— and Co., the real estate dealers. Isn't that something? Cancer rules cooking and property, doesn't it?"

21st: After reading over the story about the cat and Capricorn, I am reminded of a friend who has learned to handle her natal indications in a philosophical fashion too. She has all the indications possible in one natal chart relating to the keeping of secrets. She can't. Even when she gives her whole mind to it, and her heart, and her soul, or what have you. She just can't. And having found this out via the painful route of living, she no longer tries either to have a secret or keep it. In her natal you can see the ruler of the 12th (secrets) in the midheaven (the eyes of the world, publicity). You can also see the ruler of the 10th in the 12th. And, you will notice that her 12th is ruled by the same planet that rules her 1st (what others see). So, as I said, she has become philosophical.

23rd: A discussion the other night brought out a point about Saturn. A group of us were exchanging points that had come our way, and the talk veered to second hand furniture. We agreed that of course Saturn rules such furnishings, because it rules old things generally (through its rulership of time). We agreed too that many a chart with Saturn strong goes in for either selling or collecting this type of possession. Then we took up the renting of furnished homes. If Saturn types favored renting why did they do so? Then this point emerged: Saturn rents other people's furniture not because of any ducking of responsibility but because by owning the furniture the other person has put him or herself on record as to taste, and thus Saturn, the planet which finds it difficult to commit itself through caution, is spared the necessity to do so and feels comparatively relaxed and at home. Added point: the other person, the one owning the furniture, has provided the authority that Saturn needs for acceptance: its own comes hesitantly.

24th: As if proof of astrology were necessary, there is this true story. The heroine is a woman friend of mine. She and her husband undertook the buying of their own home not so long ago, and at the time were not concerned with astrology. But I was, and as the experience got under way I asked for and got the data I was after. Not to give away too much of their private lives, let me put this much on record. The signing of the papers which made the house theirs took place at the time the Sun was just on the 8th cusp of the horary chart. Having got this, I waited. The first thing that happened was a problem involving the insurance on the house (an 8th house matter). Next, their minds turned to the necessity of making their wills, a thing neither had been concerned about previously, as I happened to know. (Another 8th house matter.) One day my friend informed me that she had taken an interest in music, and had bought her first good record, intending to amass a good record library of music. What was the record? Beethoven's No. 26! (In case you don't know it, it is the only sonata which employs a movement known as the Funeral March.) And I am genuinely sorry to have to report the final episode in the experience. No, not death. But the termination of owning the home, which certainly came quickly. (The 8th house rulership of death is also a rulership of other forms of termination, of course.)

28th: The local branch of an international organization has been soliciting both donations of money and also contributions of clothing in my community. The first we all meet without question. The second we (my family and I) personally met last week with a monumental mound of clothing which required two women workers to lift and get down to the car. A day or so later one of the higher-ups in the organization personally phoned us to thank us. But the other side of the picture came when we offered to donate, as our bit in the request for books, a sizable stack of astrology magazines of recent origin. With perfect courtesy they were definitely and finally refused, as unacceptable reading!

29th: "I didn't get along with my mother, but she would be an interesting character to study astrologically," one of my clients said to me. "However, I have no way of finding out what her Ascendant was; back when she was born no one was paying any attention to birth times, for we were much less astrologically conscious as a nation." I said, "What comes to your mind as an outstanding characteristic?" "Well, she used to hoard clothes. She had things in those huge trunks which she would only exhibit, never wear; her pleasure in them seemed to be just sentiment, or connected with memory, or because she liked pretty things. How she hung on to them, even to the point of paying sizable bills

Key Cycle of the Month

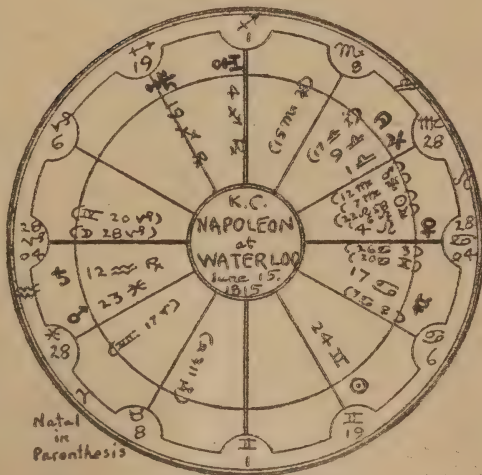

Napoleon at Waterloo

Had Napoleon's astrologer—known of the Key Cycle, he most certainly could not have advised his emperor to go into action at Waterloo on June 15, 1815. And, parenthetically, had he advised against it, Napoleon probably would have done it anyway, for part of Bonaparte's trouble was that he liked astrology only when it favored him. Present day notable examples of this same weakness are not far to seek among headline names in the news: Hitler and Mussolini would head such a modern list.

The urge to battle is obvious—look at Napoleon's five natal planets in the war 7th, together with his natal midheaven within orb of the 7th cusp. And Venus, his ruling planet, was at the 7th KC cusp.

This is the most famous case in the world of the fall which threatens all who were born with Saturn at the midheaven, so we should expect to find Saturn playing a star role in the Key Cycle of that fall, at that time, and at that place. And Saturn very kindly obliges, for its natal position in his horoscope is at the most sensitive point of his war 7th. No one should ever be advised to hazard reputation, position or credit when Saturn is at the 7th; no one should do any of these things when the natal ruler of the 4th or occupant of the 10th is at the 7th. All these are the exact description of Napoleon's natal Saturn.

More. Saturn was his KC ruler at the time and place. Still more. Saturn was transiting his KC ascendant, making him quite stubborn and a bit blind to all the probable eventualities. And Uranus, planet of sudden changes, was transiting his KC midheaven, proclaiming the moment as one in which his governmental position was under grave threat.

We read in ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA that Napoleon entrusted part of his tactics to General Grouchy, a political friend whom he had placed in charge of part of his forces. This friend became confused and simply did not do as instructed during the battle of Waterloo. See Neptune at the cusp of friends in this Key Cycle. (Neptune had not then been discovered, so part of the reading could not have been made by even the best astrologer in the world.)

As we have pointed out before, Waterloo was on the exact geographic line where Napoleon's natal Saturn was rising, according to the Pyramid Locality System. We thus see one of the typically complete blendings of nativity, Key Cycle, locality, time and event that astrology is constantly producing. This illustration is outstanding because of the historic publicity that has been given to the event, but just as complete and beautiful illustrations of the working of nature's laws through the mind and hand of man can be found in every life.

Napoleon's horoscope used here was taken from 1001 NOTABLE NATIVITIES, of which it is No. 731. The ephemeris for 1815 used was White's, borrowed from the Library of The Philosophical Research Society, Los Angeles. The Sun position used for calculating this Key Cycle was Leo 22° 57' 41", within the hour for the whole degree given in NOTABLE NATIVITIES.

FEBRUARY, 1943

REVOLUTION COMING IN JAPAN

Russia Giving All It Has; Needs Help

Our allies, the Russians, who have held the fort till we got ready to take our place in the field against the common enemy, have given and continue to give all they have. This month may, and probably will, create the appearance of inexhaustible Russian effort and material; but the truth is they need much outside assistance quick and in great volume. This month's solar eclipse is going to reveal numerous weak spots all over the world—and it is up to her allies, including us, to prevent them in Russia. The transiting Saturn, too, is now burdensome there.

South American War Fever Up Several Degrees

Mars plays an outstanding role in South America's February Key Cycles, affecting the fortunes of those in top spots. Chile continues to feel this vibration, with more upsets among executives. Argentina feels it more during the latter half of the month, possibly with added impetus to join the Allies definitely against the Axis (the people have long desired it). Our ally, Brazil, is in for complications for some time; may be loss of high official.

There will, of course, be no immediate confirmation of this, but the recent astrological vibrations which have laid the preparatory groundwork for revolution in Japan now definitely blend into the organization stage this month. The position of Pluto is now on the 4th cusp of Japan's political horoscope and also on the 10th of her Pyramid chart—the 10th being the government and the 4th those who oppose it. The 4th is also the physical assets, lands, permanent establishments of a nation or individual, and the February eclipse falls on Tokyo's pyramid 4th, threatening loss and disintegration for several years to come in this department. Hirohito's horoscope is very uncomfortable this month to the extent that his divinity becomes less apparent to Jap thinkers. And there will be many private questions asked.

German Army Heads Disagree; Hitler Powerful, but Thwarted

February's pressures, both from outside and inside that ill-led nation, will be keenly felt this month by Germany. She is particularly vulnerable to air attack during February and March—this month can well be the beginning of the end of Nazi power over the German people, for both resistance and aggression will be weaker for a few months. This does not mean we can defeat Germany by waiting for its collapse—far from it. Time is in their favor. Hitler is temporarily strong, but not strong enough to ride successfully all the cross currents that will be running through the armed forces and their commanders. He will sink deeper into ruthlessness, while attempting to put a decent appearance on it abroad for purposes of the negotiated peace he hopes for but will never get. He has ideas that look good on paper, but delays will render them worthless if the United Nations grasp their opportunities to get there first and in greater numbers—opportunities that are golden.

China Strong but Chiang Has Troubles

The thought and work that is now being done in and for China will have far reaching beneficial results. February sees intelligent changes being made within the governmental structure, despite some contrary elements. The safety and personal effectiveness of General Chiang Kai Shek are threatened in February, as are those of some others close to him in administrative and military circles. Every precaution is to be taken. The education of China's masses receives some worthy advance this month.

Congress Slow To Realize Our Present Great Opportunity

The playing of petty politics is a very real threat against the success of the part we could and should take in the world picture of Allied victory as soon as possible. The new congress isn't indicated as covering itself with unselfish glory, particularly this month; rather, it seems to want to block most of the moves that would be most to our eventual advantage. American leadership and performance can now join the front ranks of all Allied planning and effort, but great cooperation between the departments of our government will be necessary to produce the streamlined outcome we want. The trouble seems to be an attitude that we're doing all right, so why not take time off to indulge the grabby tendencies of our own minority groups? Yet never again in the next five years will we be able to profit so much by a united pull toward our real goal—every dilution will cost triple in the end.

Our West Coast to Become More War Conscious

Recent food problems on the West Coast have impressed the war on the stomachs of the people in that region. But this month will bring it to the attention of the brains of our western natives. More public thought and activity, together with visible evidence of cooperation with the armed forces, will be evident. Criticism of those in power, civilly and militarily, will rise, with reforms hastily applied to locations that need them most. The public will feel deprivation for some months.

Our Pacific Bases Vastly Strengthened

The vibrations now centering in mid-Pacific, from the Aleutians to Honolulu, indicate further additions to the great military and naval strength already established there by America. That these bases are a great threat to Japan is well known; it is a threat that will soon be felt by Nippon, in the near future if not actually this month—opportunity for successful strategy from these locations is definitely present right now, according to astrological testimony. Japanese attacks against them are almost to be welcomed, if the enemy is foolish enough to attempt them, for we are exceptionally well prepared.

England Adjusts Command; Churchill Criticized Again

England is very intense this month, ready, willing and anxious to get into all kinds of action. Public pressure for performance outweighs all theorising and temporizing. This reaches into highest governmental places, with most officials desirous of putting forth every possible effort to bring the enemy to his knees. Some sort of peace feeler may arrive, but will have short shrift. The public knows it can achieve complete victory and will be satisfied with nothing less, even though it call for more suffering for a little longer—provided no time is wasted. Prime Minister Churchill comes in for further criticism, deserved or otherwise, this time from the rank and file of civilian life, for several months.

Mussolini Loses More Influence Over Masses

The Italian people are close to political upheaval, if not already in it. A new vibration of the inner spirit of the nation is coming to the surface and threatens all false leaders. Mussolini will not get through this present Saturnine testing of his past acts—he is in the end of his second Saturn cycle, when each of us must stand trial for all errors committed, and his have been many and great. His control over the masses is practically ended. This month precipitates his decline, for there is threat of violence in Rome, either from the enemy or through popular action against further prosecution of the war. A new Italian leader is present among the people and will come to power, perhaps sooner than political experts think. Now is a strong and good time for the masses of Italy to rise, even against the oppression of the Nazi stranglehold.

The Horoscope Detective

by Rita Doane Williams

MERCURY

Having five times practiced our art of detecting the horoscope of an individual from him- or herself in person, rather than continuing to confine ourselves to the practice of reading the person from the known chart, we have now arrived at the task of getting a little practice in detecting the planet Mercury strong in the birth horoscope.

It always helps us in narrowing down our first surmises to have the person we are currently analyzing in a group of other persons; for contrast and comparison is the quickest way of getting people sorted out. They will react on each other in ways that highlight their typicalities. For instance, a Saturn strong person all by him- or herself will not give as strong an impression of aloof aloneness as will this same person in a group of Venus and Jupiter strong persons: their warmth and geniality will throw the sterner Saturn into high relief.

Mercury strong people do not exhibit their prime characteristic until they are with others.

On the evening in question, you have been in the living room of your host or hostess for perhaps an hour. You have watched, listened to the talk, and observed. You tentatively suspect Neptune strong in that person; the other probably has Mars strong. Then a third person, on whom you begin to focus.

This third person has not been left out of the conversation once since the party started—but you didn't notice that fact until now. You might not have become conscious of it at all if you hadn't been an observant astrologer. For this third person speaks so ingratiatingly, even charmingly, is so responsive and yet in no way personally obtrusive, that you rather took him or her for granted at first. But as the guests wore out their initial (and typical) subjects of conversation and the give-and-take slowed, you did begin to note that your subject always came up with an interesting observation, or piece of information, at the right moment. And further, that he or she could and did catch any conversational ball thrown, and threw it back with some matching experience or knowledge of the subject. This happened once, twice, three times, four—and then you registered consciously that this person must have quite a fund of information, and of course experience—but how could any one person have had personal experience of such a range of occupations, subjects, fields of endeavor? Why, he or she wasn't old enough!

And it was at that moment that you said to yourself inaudibly, "Ah yes, Mercury strong."

Having sniffed the scent, you were off. Now you began quietly to take a positive, albeit soft pedalled, part in the conversation. You tried as subtly as you were able to bring the talk back to topics already touched upon. The first time you succeeded, you watched your subject expectantly. Wasn't there just an appreciable hesitation—or impatience—before he or she managed adroitly to change the subject to something else? You waited discreetly; then tried again to steer the conversation back to still another topic you remembered had already come up. Yes, the same thing happened: this person certainly did seem to have been given pause, and certainly did make an effort to introduce a fresh topic.

So far, so good. You had tested Mercury and got what you expected. You had found that this person was able to contribute to almost any subject for a few sentences or ideas, but that was definitely all. And that if you, or another, did not have something further to say that was enough of that.

Perhaps you did have more to say, and now said it. If it was as interesting as you hoped, you roused a gleam in the eye of your subject and found yourself the target of well mannered but intelligent sharp shooting. You were asked for details, or had your attention called to those which conflicted. You were forced to conclude that this person was pretty sharply observant, even acute, and skeptical with a motive that was not skepticism for its own sake, but sprang from a curious inquisitiveness which was the life motive.

If you had a tendency to wriggle on the scientific pin while this person concentrated upon you, it did not last long, for the interest didn't. Keen as it was while it lasted, it didn't last. You heard his or her voice suddenly launching out on something that branched off from the main mental road, and found yourself alone on that road.

When next your chance came to proceed with your own quiet scientific research you deliberately started a minor argument, timed so that your subject would be sure to overhear it. Ah, you had him, or her! The quick gleam flashed into the eye again. He or she politely entered the discussion.

On which side?

Well, in the next three minutes you never did find out. Because your subject took both sides of the discussion, and took them equally well! Took them so well that both sides led off in different directions at once, and the rest of the company lost all track of the original discussion; but seemed perfectly content to just sit, and listen. What they heard was eloquent, interesting, but as full of digressions and side tracks, interpolations and interjected stories, as the course taken by a small boy let loose in unfamiliar territory.

Small boy—. Hmm.

Now that the thought had flashed into your mind, it did seem that your subject, masculine or feminine, young, middle aged, or elderly, had about them something of the perpetual adolescent, in its best and most attractive sense. Something of eagerness, of spontaneity, of impulsiveness, of always striving after some achievement, that found life interesting and made it so for others.

While this thought was occupying you, you remembered another test or two you wanted to apply. You began by asking if anyone else shared your secret vice—doing puzzles? Why, yes, your Mercury strong friend did, and without hesitation. Since you had been so brave in making your confession, he (or she) would make one to match yours—their secret vice was conjuring tricks! And card tricks. And tricks.

As you expected, it was your subject with Mercury strong who was the first to complete a puzzle; and who then demonstrated quite a little manual skill and dexterity with balls, oranges, cards, or what have you. If you had a trick of your own, he or she could learn it, and did.

Your next test was simply to pick up a book or newspaper you found handy. You had seen your Mercury strong person run his or her eyes over the book shelves when first entering the room, and it didn't surprise you that he or she should follow this move of yours to the extent of moving across the room to you and asking what you had found? You answered that a headline (or title) had reminded you of a story—but you remembered only this much of it. "Oh," your Mercury strong subject readily volunteered, "the rest of that story is—"

That was what you wanted; but not all you wanted. So when the story had been told, you complimented the teller, and followed it up with a pun, or a play on words, which was promptly matched or bettered with more of the same. By this time the attention of the others had been caught, and you could settle back for a moment to listen with satisfaction to the quickness of wit, humor, and repartee your subject now displayed. In the first pause you tried your hand at imitating a celebrity, purposely breaking down in the middle of your attempt. This brought your subject to your rescue, and you watched as facile, as versatile, as analytical an exhibition as you could wish, even to the point of mimicry of the accents involved.

Hmm. You had previously thought this person keenly observant; this certainly proved it. But wasn't there something further involved? Could so good a mimicry be given without some pretty sharp critical powers?

Ah, you would test that; it was typical of a strong Mercury. When you could, you got your subject alone in a corner. You risked your good reputation by venturing to criticize some absent soul just a little. And you found your thought pointed up, sharpened, focused, and added to by this person in a way that made you glad you yourself weren't the subject of his, or her, critical powers. It was all so reasonable and logical! It dissected.

If this person was of your opposite sex, now while you had them alone was your chance to find out more. You called upon your own powers, such as they were, and without being obvious (for you knew this would lose you the interest of your subject), tried your hand at a little skirmishing. You hoped this person would beat you at it. Well, by the time you were ready to call for help, you hadn't been disappointed. You had been fencing with what you were ready to admit was a master of the light art.

But the moment your own powers even slackened, so did the interest. By now you expected this. Your Mercury strong subject had shown this typicality in several other ways—this darting, flitting, nervous, quick, unrestrainable flexibility of interest.

As this person sought other excitement you watched the physical movements, so reproductive of the character. Although these did not convey an impression of purposelessness, there was almost continual movement of one kind or another; quick, active, busy movement, that gave an impression of agility, nimbleness, and somehow of compactness. Occasionally the movement or gesture was quite unexpected; but always controlled. There was no sprawling, or loose movement. Neither was there any relaxation, that you could see.

The body of your subject gave this same impression of compactness. If the Mercury were rising in the Ascendant, or a Mercury sign was, or if your subject showed unmistakably a Mercurial nativity, with an Ascendant subdued to it, then this body was slightly more than average height, inclining toward tallness; was slender not only as a unit, but in all its parts—the fingers were slender, and possibly longer than average, the neck the same, the nose slender, and even the lips inclined to be thin. The chin tended to be somewhat pointed, and slender. The chest was comparatively narrow; the head, while long, inclined toward narrowness too. It was held erect, and so was the entire frame. The arms and the legs were rather long, and slender. The forehead was inclined toward height. Everything about the person, both build and clothing, gave an impression of neatness, and no waste. You felt that while the body was comparatively lightly built, it was also well poised. The ears were not large, the hair was neutral, indefinite, and the rather light or pale complexion gave evidences of tanning easily.

Because of the bright, expressive, quickness of the sight and expression there was something attractive about the appearance. In fact, if your subject was a quite well evolved child of Mercury strong, he or she might be quite fascinating, in a delicate, graceful, fine, cameo style. The antithesis of sensual.

You had noted already the nervousness of your subject, and you tried to find out either by direct questioning or by listening to rumor and gossip, whether this person had had nervous troubles in the past. Or whether there was a susceptibility to colds, troubles with the chest, lungs. And whether this person had ever been threatened with consumption. If you heard of headaches, difficulty in getting to sleep or remaining so, it corroborated. So did asthma, blood troubles, and of course mental overstrain.

Your job of placing Mercury strong in a well evolved person was of course more difficult and complicated than it would have been if the person were of lower evolution. Then the earmarks of a prominent Mercury, to which your subject could react only on the lower planes, would have confronted you with a person who caused you to come alert and guess Mercury by a strong impression of shiftiness. This person showed an excessive talkativeness, to the point of minutely splitting hairs, contradicting, arguing; and an utter inability to listen to anyone else. There was effusiveness, even gushing, when in the presence of successful, influential people. There was a constant reference in the talk to being "meant for better things"; and you noticed that this person couldn't stand for a minute being in an inferior position, but perpetually exacted the attention and service of everyone around. Yet the talk was light, frivolous, superficial. There were protestations of being "sensitive," sometimes hysterically so; yet you found that when this person was called upon to help others their "sensitiveness" was merely selfishness. You even heard evidence of untruthfulness, scheming, ingratitude, and dishonesty of a planned and cunning kind. There had been, you heard, a practical attitude and a cool head in love affairs. In work, this person had used that head more to evade work than to accomplish it. You were able to note with your own senses the pervading vanity of this subject.

But the detecting of a well evolved Mercurial person being more interesting, you managed to find yourself in the company of your subject of the evening on your way home that night. You proposed walking since the distance was short; this enabled you to watch for predominant interests encountered. Although this person had not visited you before, you expected that when you invited him or her to come in for a moment, that no questions would be asked you of the route. And none were asked. You watched your subject find the way by strict observation, and because he or she was instinctively accustomed to noticing sign posts, bill boards, details of the landscape, something interesting about a home, etc. You knew that if this person were in a district but a few days, enough would have been observed to enable the way to be found in almost any direction. You watched now as this person noticed with quick sight an advertisement just replacing a familiar one, and which corner it was on. How he or she knew when you passed a meeting hall, a public lecture auditorium, a school, a library.

And when your own home was reached, you were almost amused to find how few moments were needed to enable this person to find the location of your books, to sense a concealed drawer, and to comment on any ingenuity in the building or furnishing of your house. If you collected anything, this drew from your Mercury strong subject an equality of interest—regardless of just what you collected.

You proposed a little something to eat. Sure enough, this person was a spare eater. Even had certain little biases, dietary habits, fads, that he or she did not insist upon but that inevitably came out. You had a feeling when you opened your refrigerator that the quick eyes beside you could have named every object in it after you closed the door and told you just how far you fell short of perfection of orderliness and sanitation; in fact, you got a strong impression of fastidiousness. However, the entertaining and charming table manners and conversation of your guest offset; and confirmed your original assumption.

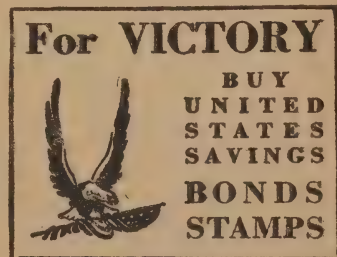

You almost hesitated to allow him or her to help you dispose of the waste; but still you kept your eyes open during the process. You saw this person go to the length of folding paper rather neatly before putting it into a trash basket.

After your guest left you, you sat down for a few moments to review. You glanced about your room, remembering how he or she had handled that ornament, walked over and touched that lamp shade, bent to smell your flowers, taken the pains to look out of your window in both directions. When you added your kitchen and table experience to this, you found you had had a guest whose five senses were strongly developed; and who never ceased to use one or another of them.

You remembered something else, now you thought of it: you remembered getting an impression that your guest was not at his or her best here, whereas it had been otherwise in the house you had quitted. This, you now realized, was because Mercury strong requires a number of people, the more the better, to really bring out all sides of the character; being alone with just one soon rouses impatience, and so self consciousness.

Well, you thought, you were practically sure you were right—Mercury dominated this horoscope in some way. But there was just one more thing you must remember to do; you must keep watch over this person from now on to see what happened if moods, or times, of depression came. You must test this by noting when such moods appeared; and by being on hand to throw out some bait in the form of a piece of information, or an introduction to an interesting person, or something else that would suggest an added mental impression to be gained. If the mood vanished like clouds before a rising sun of alertness, you could be satisfied: it was Mercury strong.

(Next month we will take up the detecting of another planet.)

ASTROLOGY OF LITERARY SUCCESS

naturally he would not condemn anything without having investigated it first. He says he is willing to give astrology a chance. He is going to check how it works. The Army might take over his career temporarily, but he is destined for much future literary success.

Richard English's chart was read October 7, 1941. He is rather a new writer and has been most successful for the last two years. A very nice gentleman, with exquisite manners, genuine and a deep student. Like Sydney Skolsky, Mr. English has Gemini on the mid-heaven and Virgo rising. The ruler of his 2nd house is Venus, 28 degrees of Virgo is on the cusp, but 27 degrees of Libra is in the 3rd, so we consider Venus as the ruler of that house.

Venus is sextile to Mercury, one of the old rules for a good writer, and square to Mars, endowing him with the gift of subtlety. Mercury the ruler of the 10th, is in the 10th in the writer's sign, Gemini. In the house relating to travel as well as to publishing, (the 9th) we find the Sun, Saturn and the Dragon's Head; and we understand Mr. English took a trip to South America and wrote some interesting articles as a result.

Jupiter is in his 2nd, another indication of money coming to him through writings and publishings. Mr. English has sold many stories to magazines, being especially identified for awhile with Collier's, I believe. The ruler of his 6th house (work), in the 5th (drama), he might later on work for radio and television, and be most successful. He expresses himself very decisively; he pulls no punches, has good sayle, is successful—Mercury ruler of his 10th, and his life ruler also, is trine to Jupiter in the 2nd.

Mr. English has a grand trine in Earth signs, making him practical, patient and able to surmount some rather heavy difficulties.

His is an excellent example of a writer's chart. The three planets at birth that were retrograde indicate that while young he grew within himself and later was able to transmute this growth into tangible success. I know that at some date in the near future you will pick up a current magazine and read a story of his with added interest, because of knowing him through his horoscope.

These examples prove conclusively, I think, that one's use of talents shown in the nativity is a matter of personal choice. Just as in the cases of these writers, where we see their individuality shining through, each of us can put what we have to work for us in the field of our selection. No definitely set horoscope is necessary to the making of a writer—I believe that if you have the urge to write, you can write, and that the best way for you to do it is to understand your peculiar astrological endowment, some of the fundamental rules of writing, and then stick to it till you arrive at the top.

throughout space. Things may not be as we want them but we discover the basic integrity which sustains the universal plan. All things are as they should be and as they must be, and the only way that they can be made to change is for the causes of that change to be set in motion. In man's world man must cause those changes himself. These changes are not brought about merely by rearranging existing patterns; they result from new patterns, new orders of living and thinking, and these must flow out of the individual himself. The good things men do can also build a star, a star of light and hope, and all constructive effort will add glory to that star. As Zoroaster said: "Good thoughts, good desires, and good actions are the glory of the world." This bright star built of the nobler vibrations of the world is the star in the East, a light to every man who comes into the world.

The good in each man serves all men and the good in all men secures each man in the way of light.

Her matrimonial 7th also holds Venus.

Please remember that up to here in these lessons we have not discussed the natures of the planets—we aren't supposed to know anything except what has appeared in Lessons I and II—we are dealing solely with houses and rulers.

With the ruler of her 7th at the sensitive 12th (all cusps are sensitive—the closer a planet is to the cusp the more powerfully it is felt in that house) she is going to have considerable matrimonial experience of a confidential nature. This is because the 7th is matrimony and the 12th has to do with secrets, confidences, things good and bad done behind the scenes, as we learned from the key words here last month.

What contacts (aspects) has her Saturn? It is in aspect with Uranus, which brings in the 9th house, for the 9th is ruled by Uranus. We thus see that her married life will be concerned with distance, travel, philosophy. She may meet her first husband while on a trip or voyage, or he may come from a distant place, or he could be a native of some other nation, a foreigner. There also will probably be considerable accent on religion in her marriage; her husband might be a preacher, a minister of the gospel, a philosopher.

Her Saturn (not because it is Saturn in answering her matrimonial questions, but because it is the ruler of her matrimonial 7th) is also in contact (aspect) with Neptune. Neptune is located in the 4th house of her horoscope, bringing in all the 4th house matters indicated by last month's key words: home, estate, domestic conditions, parents (both hers and his), et cetera. But this is not all we see concerning her Neptune, for it is the ruler of her 10th, thus bringing into her matrimonial picture the matter of reputation, her career, her relations with superiors, et cetera (see the key words—better still, know them). This, by the way, is a rather revealing set-up, even at the beginning of our questioning on this one department of life: she has the rulers of her secrets and her reputation both linked with her marriage. She will have the opportunity and perhaps the temptation to pursue confidential experiences, while at the same time being herself the means of making them public—in connection with her marriage.

Neptune being in her 4th, parents, aspecting Saturn, ruler of 7th in 12th, she might have a secret marriage while living at the parental home (4th), which would later come to light (10th, ruled by Neptune), the marriage being with some man described in our foregoing discussion.

There we have a brief resume of a few of the things her ruler of the 7th will mean to Mrs. T, for they are some of her vibrations and thought forms regarding that department of her life.

But we also have the Sun in her 7th to examine.

A little further along we shall see that the house position of her Sun accents that part of her life very strongly, because of the deep inner significance of the Sun's position and condition in every life, but in order to pursue our orderly analysis of the horoscope we shall continue to treat it as something that links houses together by rulership.

In Mrs. T's nativity the Sun rules the 3rd, thus bringing into her marriage (the 7th house position of her Sun) a powerful requirement having to do with the lower mind, the intellect—she will demand a mate whose mind is above the average, someone with intellectual capacity or achievement to his credit. He might be an author. All the other key words of the 3rd house are here involved, too, and will suggest numerous matrimonial conditions. Her marriage will affect relations with her brothers, sisters and neighbors, or they will affect her marriage, or both.

The Sun in her horoscope has contact with Mars. If you do not know the aspects, refer to the preceding course of five lessons on aspects which appeared in these pages, beginning in the issue of July, 1942.

This gives us a link between her 7th and the 6th, where Mars is located in her nativity, showing that her marriage is to be affected by her state of health or that of her mate; that inferiors, servants, will play an important part in what marriage means to her. Her husband, through this aspect, might also be connected with the healing arts, as a doctor, surgeon, public health officer, nerve specialist. He might be strongly attached to or repelled by small animals, for these also are shown by the 6th—she and her husband might find any matter connected with the 6th house to be a bond or a cause of separation. We here make mental note of this fact, but have not yet had enough of this course to make a competent estimate as to which it would more likely be.

Those are some of the things that Mars will mean to her because of its location in her 6th; but Mars is the ruler of her 11th and co-ruler of her 5th.

As ruler of her 11th, we see it bringing into her marriage important friendship contacts; her friends will affect her husband, his friends will affect her, their mutual friends will affect their marriage. The friends will have something about them which is below Mrs. T's social, occupational or health station in life, for they come to her through the 6th house—this also could mean that she herself will be called upon to serve them or with them, for the 6th is the house explaining the conditions of her personal service to others. Each of the key words of the 11th should be applied through her 6th in connection with her marriage (as well as other questions about her—but here we are discussing only the ramifications of what her marriage will mean and indicate).

As the co-ruler of her 5th we see her Mars brings to her marriage, through the house of service (6th), her own and others' creative ability. Because the 5th is the house of love affairs, it is quite possible that she would meet her husband-to-be through an environment of health or illness. We have already seen that he might be a doctor—well, there's a nice little plot: she is in a hospital, the handsome young foreign interne enters the room, their eyes meet. All right, all right! But you can reconstruct astrologically any situation you read in your novels and short stories—because astrology explains all the environmental situations of life.

And that, in a way, is what the astrological interpreter is doing—dramatizing nature's laws, telling what they mean in terms of the way humans work them out in living. By seeing a law in terms of its action we gradually perceive some of what the law is intrinsically.

As co-ruler of her 5th, Mars in the 6th also refers to her children. One of her children might become a doctor (our dramatic sense might suggest that this could be a son of a famous surgeon, Dr. T in this case, following in his father's footsteps).

It isn't that these are the things that will happen in the sense of fated events; it is, however, that these described events are possible under the laws that are expressing through the horoscope. Practice interpretation by finding the astrological law at work behind every event that is known in the life; it will be but one of the events possible under that law or set of laws (positions and conditions in the horoscopes of those involved in the event), but—and this is scientifically very important—it will not be one of the events possible under any other set of laws than those that are expressed in such horoscopes.

And we also see Venus in Mrs. T's 7th, as already mentioned. This is not as powerful by itself as the Sun or the 7th house ruler, for it is at considerable distance from the cusp of the house in which it is located. But there are other factors that strengthen this position by repetition—that is, some of the indications of Venus in this horoscope are found elsewhere, too, making for accent where otherwise it would not appear. For instance, her Venus rules the 5th, which has already been discussed in connection with her 7th house affairs under Mars; and it is co-ruler of the 11th, also discussed under her Mars rulership. Thus we see both the ruler and co-ruler of both the 5th and 11th houses in her chart of life are related to her marriage, doubling the influences already discussed under these houses.

Her Venus is aspecting Jupiter in the 1st, the house of her personality, temperament and manners. And Jupiter rules her 6th, coming back to double those health and service indexes already mentioned. It begins to look more and more like the doctor.

Now, as practice, continue with Mrs. T's horoscope and ask a question about the affairs of each house. How about her finances, a 2nd house question? And her occupation, starting with her 10th house? Her love affairs? Begin with her 5th and pursue the method here given. Then try all these on your own chart.

Remember, please, that all this is external to the real nature of the native. We are dealing with the application chart only, trying to estimate his or her typical ways and means.

In the next lesson we will go into the interpretation of the signs and planets, getting closer to why the native is what he is and why he makes the choices he makes.

Solving your Interpretation Problems

If puzzled in reading your own or a friend's chart, select the configuration most difficult to you and submit it to Mrs. Kelley. Please do not ask her to interpret an entire horoscope—be reasonable. by Agnes T. Kelley

"I have Cancer rising. So have many other people. If this, by placing my marriage under Capricorn, indicates that it will be of Saturnian nature, is it reasonable to believe that everyone with Cancer rising marries someone older?"

C. W.

Everyone born with Cancer rising will have a marriage conforming to Saturn in one of several ways; but not everyone will marry someone older (one of the possible ways).

And it isn't as simple as that, either. For in every one of these thousands of charts with Cancer rising, the Saturn will be placed differently as to house and sign occupied, and as to aspects involved. Which in each case will influence the marriage differently.

In some cases, of course, there will be no marriage; for that is distinctly one of the Saturnine possibilities. In some cases this will be modified to a late marriage, or one delayed or postponed by obstacles of lingering nature, probably responsibilities.

In other cases the mate chosen will be older, or will be widowed; or will be of a nature which makes him or her seem older to the native.

In still other cases, the chosen mate will be a native of Capricorn, or will have a Saturn prominent and strong in the nativity.

Add to this all the thousands of modifications caused by the individual planetary positions and aspects, and you have the reason why everyone born with a Cancer Ascendant does, and does not, have the same marital experiences.

"When Saturn gets around to entering Cancer, in 1944, it will oppose my Moon and at the same time conjunct my wife's Sun. Please let us know what to expect."

MR. AND MRS. L. H.

It will depend greatly upon the relation between you when this ray is felt.

You know that in order to apply astrology, the astrologer must be aware of the level of development with which he is dealing in the human being. For example, such an aspect felt by an Australian bushman and his mate (and they will be feeling it, realize) will have an effect widely different from that produced on civilized persons. There will even be a difference between the various grades of civilized persons themselves, because of their evolutionary status and because of their different national consciousness.

Since I do not know what the relationship is between you at present, what past factors still linger and have not been solved, what bonds there are and are not, I can only reply generally.

If you and your wife have unsettled problems of significant size, then this time will undoubtedly bring them to a head definitely and in a way that will require heavy effort to adjust and settle. Honesty and sincerity are needed, and willingness to accept responsibility for past causes or errors. This is because your Moon (you being a man) indicates your relations with women at the time; and your wife's Sun represents her then relations with men. So your union will feel Saturn's influence.

SOLVING YOUR INTERPRETATION PROBLEMS

But if you have no lingering or unsolved problems of sizable nature, then it will mean that your mutual past will assume an importance that binds you the more strongly together. Both will feel the ties becoming more permanent because of some reappearance from the past which is mutually experienced. It may happen too that both will be called upon at the same time to undertake considerably more responsibility as a pair; and if this is willingly accepted, the discharging of such effort will bind you two closer.

If I knew more of both charts, more interpretation could be given. You will be able to apply the principle to the individual indications of each of your natal Saturns, your Moon and your wife's Sun, according to the significance at birth.

"My fiancée has three planets in Sagittarius in her 4th house, and they oppose one in Gemini, her Moon. (The three are Sun, Venus and Mercury.) I myself have Taurus on my 4th, untenanted; and my Venus is un-aspected. What do you think of the prospects of a settled home?"

You are wondering whether the natural 9th house sign on the 4th with three planets therein will mean lack of permanency in the married home? Especially as your own indications show desire for domestic roots and habits?

There will have to be some adjustment between you two; for you represent the two extremes in your respective attitudes toward home. You, the fixed (Taurus) builder, and your fiancée the movable (Sagittarius) traveler. The only way to work it out happily in married life is for both to give up a little of the natural inclinations, and meet half way. You must not insist upon one home for a lifetime, but must be willing to move about reasonably, and to take trips every so often. Your fiancée must not give way to every impulse to go somewhere, or move the home again; but must express this urge in other ways that will satisfy her but not impose upon you. She must have a career of her own, a movable occupation.

You remember the ancient nation whose custom it was to have a general bonfire every five years upon which was burned the fixed possessions of the inhabitants? This idea was very salutary in terms of character, for by means of it too much attachment to possessions was done away with; but nowadays it might not be so feasible in view of our dependence upon household complexity. Still, something in the character of your fiancée would be expressed by finding means of changing the household possessions at times.

"When a transitting planet enters the 7th house of the chart which feels it most, the native or his partners, etc.?"

W. T.

The native, for it is his chart. He feels it in several ways, direct and indirect. For instance, his own attitude toward his partners, equals, allies, and opponents changes in accord with the nature of the transitting planet. Then too, under these vibrations the type of equals he meets (attracts) will in all cases be found to conform to the planet in question.

A secondary factor is that as the native's own attitude changes the persons in his 7th house feel it and respond accordingly.

Have you no Capricornian friends or family members you can observe as Jupiter transits their 7th? Or do you know someone born in Sagittarius who is showing symptoms of feeling Saturn-Uranus in 7th. People with either Capricorn or Sagittarius rising are equally good subjects for study.

"I am a native of Leo, Virgo rising in my natal. Neither in my birth chart nor in my Equilibrium chart are there any transits through either my 3rd or my 8th house. Yet recently my brother died suddenly. I don't claim to be an astrologer, am studying though, and believe this death should show astrologically. What about it?"

E. V.

Your own 8th house is the house of your death. Your 3rd house is the house of your relations with your brothers and sisters. But the death of these kin comes under still another house, your 10th. For your 10th is the 8th house from your 3rd, and therefore rules the deaths of brothers and sisters (and neighbors), as well as other terminations concerning them.

Please notice that at present you have in your natal 10th house the two heavy planets

Saturn and Uranus; the first connoting loss or sorrow, the second unexpected and sudden experiences. I do not imply that with these planets here your brother just had to die; several other forms of Saturn-Uranus influence could have been felt.

"I am thinking of going into business with a man whose Sun trines mine, but whose Uranus-Mars conjunction falls on my 7th cusp. Will this, in your estimation, break it up with loss to me?"

N. M. F.

Not necessarily. It depends upon several factors.

What kind of business are you proposing to enter? If this business is of the nature of Uranus-Mars the indication will be a good one; that is, if it is a business having to do with inventions, ultra-modern things, news, bringing things up to date, electricity, (Uranus); or with tools, machinery, metals, heat, etc. (Mars).

Also, will this man be the salesman or the promotion man, the one who breaks new ground for the partnership?

This stimulation from him to you will result in your feeling pepped up and more inclined to take initiative and become active. But if you allow this stimulation to go to extremes, then the partnership could break up suddenly. Just resolve to tone down any excitement, tension, or irritation if any arises; be ready to be the first to relax; and nothing untoward need occur.

"I am interested in astrology as applied to the vegetable kingdom. Will you recommend some books, and also give me a general idea what rules the various parts and functions of growing things?"

MRS. V. A.

You will find some of the information you want in various text books. You might acquire a Culpepper on herbs, which will give the various rulerships. In Manly P. Hall's "Key Words" is a list of such rulerships including trees, etc. In "The Philosophy of Natural Magic" by Henry Cornelius Agrippa is considerable valuable data, not only on astrology in the vegetable kingdom, but on other specific rulerships, much of which is not to be found elsewhere.

As to the second half of your question, there is this passage from Agrippa:

"Amongst vegetables, everything that bears fruit is from Jupiter; and everything that bears flowers is from Venus. All seed and bark is from Mercury. All roots are from Saturn. All wood is from Mars. And all leaves from the Moon. Wherefore, all that bring forth fruit and not flowers are of Saturn and Jupiter; but they that bring forth flowers and seed, and not fruit, are of Venus and Mercury; those that are brought forth of their own accord, without seed, are of the Moon and Saturn. All beauty is from Venus, all strength from Mars, and every planet rules and disposeth that which is like to it. Also in stones, their weight, clamminess, and slipticness (?) is of Saturn, their use and temperament of Jupiter, their hardness from Mars, their life from the Sun, their beauty and fairness from Venus, their occult virtue from Mercury, and their common use from the Moon."

I think you would find this book interesting.

7-Year Periods in Your Life

Emotional element, and is under Saturn, the great tester. This is the grand climacteric period, particularly the 43rd year. Some important change or undertaking is experienced, one that profoundly affects the entire balance of the life—it is the turning point. Rarely is any comparable shift or setting of purpose experienced at another time.

The first seven of our 7-year periods are different from the second seven such periods, although their rulers and sub-rulers repeat. They are different for the reason that the element characteristics are not the same, and also because the Moon influence hovers over them all in the first 49 years; in the same manner, Mercury pervades the second 49 years.

With the foregoing keys and suggestions, together with your own horoscope, you should be able to go back over your life up to now and gather much added understanding of your experience, as well as being able to look ahead with more awareness of how the coming years will bring forth your hitherto unperfected potentials.

When Is a Marriage Over?

Dear Wynn: How I wish now that I had written you in 1937 when I first thought of doing so. Each time I tried, I thought, "How can I possibly make it clear? I would be wrong if I were to make my husband sound like a wretch and how can I make him sound otherwise if I give all of my problem." I generally tried instead to think of pleasant things and trust God would help me if I did my best.

Then why am I writing you now? Because I realize God will help us not when we sit and wait but when we reach out for what we need to know.

As you will see from our two charts I am 45, my husband will be 45 this May. I was born Dec. 27, 1897, Lat. 40, Long. 84, I think at 5:37 am. My husband was born May 15, 1898, Lat. 34, Long. 118½, about twenty minutes past midnight.

I am wondering if I should start my life over, alone. It would have to be without funds since he has gone into his business with every dime he could borrow. It was a gamble but that is the way he does things. He knew I thought he was going in too heavy but as usual my opinion did not count.

The thing that I believe should force me to some action is the steady evidence of other women. Each time when I bring lipstick or other evidence to his attention he admits his mistakes, tells me there is no one he cares for but me, then probably next month it is the same thing over again. I can't believe a thing he says. He tells only what suits him. At times I am able to be perfectly calm when such evidence presents itself; again I go to pieces and beg him to divorce me so that I can be free of this continual punishment.

And why haven't I left him? Because I have seen so many lonely people who have divorced because of hurt pride and been destroyed trying to shape their lives again alone.

So I have gone on hoping that he spoke the truth when he said, "It won't happen again." I wanted to do what was right for both of us. In spite of his indifference to my suggestions in business I have been able to help him. But I am only helping him in a material sense—and are we both losing moral strength?

I read your answer to Mrs. R. T. in which you quote: "Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it," etc. But a good example does not seem to help my husband. Must I leave him?

At one time I took a course in story writing. Given a subject, an injustice to correct, I can write; but when I tried to use my imagination nothing came. I have wondered if the fact that I have no planets in water signs had something to do with this. It would have helped me to live without aid from my husband.

I was married before to a man 14 years my senior, who drank to excess. I left him with 12 dollars in my pocket and went to work as a cook. I had spent ten years trying to get him to give up drinking. From each marriage I have learned something. I have that restlessness of Sagittarius, but I'm not lazy, and I honestly want to do right.

MRS. A. P.

P. S.: As I was finishing the charts my husband came in. I read him what I had written. He said, "That's all over now." And that is what he has said before.

(Reply:) To any woman receiving a similar life experience, there are two kinds of advice that can be given. To the average woman the advice would be, in so many words, "Your mate is abusing the relationship, he is not putting in his share; go, and seek your personal happiness."

And then there is the advice that can be given to a woman slightly above the average in evolution, and therefore entitled to advice requiring a bigger outlook and more intelligence to understand. Philosophically, the advisor must meet his brother, or sister, on his or her level of evolution and advise according to what has been asked and what can be received. To offer to the first woman advice that would merely bewilder and then cause resentment would be unphilosophical. Not to offer such advice to the second woman would be to fail her needs.

I believe you to be the second woman. If I am wrong, put it down to my not being able to see you and amend or substantiate my judgment of your written word.

Sister, there are higher standards of judgment and motive than the phrase "personal happiness" can compass. There comes a time in evolution when the evolving soul must undertake the effort of living up to something higher in the way of motive than mere happiness, so called, of a purely personal variety. There is something higher.

From the personal we advance by slow growth to the impersonal during ages of evolution. When we consciously, voluntarily, dedicate our minds to this achievement, we hasten the process of our own evolution.

Can you want to recognize a higher motive?

After you have read the advice here offered, you will go through a struggle within your own mind and soul, turning the possibilities over and over. What you finally recognize, and accept, will have a major effect upon you.

By process of karma, you have incarnated to learn through personal experience the right (good) and the harmony (beauty) of the one (one) way to live, i.e., the way of obedience to divine law. Do you recognize those three words in parentheses? "The One, the Beautiful, and the Good." If you do not as yet know them, you will find them almost at once if you begin the study of occult philosophy.

Your experience is coming to you through this other soul you know as your husband. Through him you are meeting lack of loyalty, lack of responsibility, lack of truth, lack of self discipline. Under law the positives of these qualities are objectives for all of us—loyalty, truthfulness, responsibility and self discipline. By meeting their negatives so repeatedly and so personally, you are learning to value them correctly. Already you know, so surely that nothing will again take the knowledge from you, that the only good and beauty in life come through right living—you have pictured how harmonious and good life might be if this other soul were just the reverse of what he now is, haven't you?

Why must you have to experience this?

That is your karma. At some time you yourself embodied the negatives of these exact same virtues, and thus made it mandatory that in a future life you would so experience as to give you the true values where before were the false.

If you judge and condemn your husband for his negative qualities, and you do, then your job is realization that as you believe he must return and be corrected, so you are actually grateful that you yourself were corrected in this your present life. If you could not count upon, did not know beyond any shadow of doubt, that no injustice exists under law, life would be a sorry process; and if you do know, then you accept cheerfully and serenely your own corrections as you believe it right that others too should be corrected.

Having freed your mind for serenity on this point, you no longer have or could have any personal feeling against your husband. He is your present instrument of karma. You are in the position of nearing the end of this present corrective experience; he, on the other hand, has it still to live through in a future life, which he is now shaping for himself—as you once shaped this one you are now living.

Now what can you do to help him and yourself?

Philosophically, this second woman we believe to be you is not yet entitled to resign from this experience (marriage). We know this because there is still tension within it pointing to something still incomplete, not yet worked out. When no tension exists, when neither partner feels any forceful desire to break away, when there is serene tolerance born of greater understanding, then both may resign from the experience and leave no unfinished business. (Under law, unfinished business means something that will come up again to be worked out in the future.)

The way to achieve this is an inward process. It requires better thinking. Through right thinking, the right view of the experience, will come a new attitude toward it that will bring peace, then capacity to help each other through tolerance. At present both are hurting each other.

You should not go to the other extreme of your present conduct, and try to condone your husband's present life attitude. That would be to contribute to his delinquency. You should try for the middle attitude, that recognizes in what way he is thinking wrongly, does not personally condemn, but is ready to be the medium through which realization comes to him eventually.

By an inward process you should now begin to withdraw enough so that you can view both yourself and him with perspective. Philosophy and astrology will enable you to do this.

Next, recognize his strong points. He listened to your letter, didn't he, and was perfectly tolerant of your publicizing him in print? That took either callousness (and I don't believe he has it) or a broader than usual viewpoint, attributable to his Aquarian Ascendant. Find others; keep at it.

Next, realize that your chart shows necessity to learn impersonality through what will seem like denial: you are a Capricorn woman with Saturn at your Ascendant, which is Sagittarius, your Moon being in Aquarius.

These three signs all incline to be impersonal; and Saturn at Ascendant continues to provide experiences of self denial or forced personal denial until some measure of ability to rise above the personal is achieved. (First house, or Ascendant, is the personal house.) Neptune in your 7th, opposing your conjunction of Venus-Mars, points to necessity for refining, raising, spiritualizing, your emotional (Venus-Mars) attitude toward others (7th), especially mate. Neptune rules sacrifice, which word connotes something abandoned in favor of something better, from inward choice. The thing to be abandoned is the smaller view of self in relation with others.

Once you comparatively forget yourself, you will be made very happy by the freedom you get to help others, without standing personally in the way. Your recognition of the divine rightness of this marriage experience frees you from inward drain of vitality, sets a smile on your lips, and makes you look at your husband with new eyes. You do not resent him, you know he will learn in time, and you do see what he has already learned (his good points). You feel toward him as toward a fellow, more a friend. Comradeship grows up, because you are both struggling toward the same goal, both have good and bad points, neither can judge the other, but both can offer friendly services. You even feel free to mention your own bad points, without the feeling that you are defending. There is something he can point out to you too.

No one can do an injustice to another, you know. If you had never performed a similar injustice, and had not become liable, you would have been immune to this marriage. Ever think that no one has put you in prison? No one has murdered you? No one has been cruel to your child? No one has stolen all you had and left you to starve? These and many other experiences are simply not your karma, so you are immune to them. The law is perfect; no injustice ever existed. We are as securely protected from an experience we haven't deserved as we are immutably cast for every experience we have.

Once you have achieved this new attitude (if you are the second woman) you are free to leave and terminate this marriage when you care to do so: because your lesson will have been assimilated. And take care, if you are considering this, that you do not twist the typical Capricornian fear and self doubt and, perhaps, cowardice, into some good sounding motive for staying.

If you are the first woman, then you have every justification for seeking a divorce and freedom to gain personal happiness.

Sisters Under the Stars

Dear Wynn: I was born Sept. 30, 1903, hour unknown, in Montreal. For the past 3 years I have been in love with a lawyer born Dec. 11, 1903. Everything went fine until my sister, born in Montreal Jan. 21, 1906, messed up everything. Frankly, with her it's a gift. On the other hand, perhaps it was meant to be; I am trying to follow my stars.

You understand that as a Libran I have a hard time to decide. Today I realized my sister has influenced my whole life. It is still my fault; but knowing it doesn't help much. I live with my sister and whenever I had a boy friend we were quite friendly—finally one day I had a misunderstanding with that lawyer, and she profited by the occasion to visit him at his own rooms. I learned of it later on.

He came back and begged me to allow him to see me. He denied having had anything to do with my sister. He wanted to marry me, right away. But my sister had told me everything and he lied about it. I put him out. I had already put my sister out.

I tried to assure myself there was a lesson in it, but how I hated the lesson. As I looked back I could see that my sister had had little errands with all my boy friends.

This one was more stubborn. Would not stand for being put out. Repeatedly assured me he would murder me "quietly—quietly."

I am quite fed up with this business of living, but I do not want to be murdered quietly, quietly.

As for my sister, she did not like to live with strangers so she decided to have diphtheria. The next time I heard of her she was in a hospital. I took her back with me; we are still together.

I feel sure I want to leave town, but I am afraid, undecided. I like a soft job; perhaps Uranus trine the Moon and sextile Neptune which in turn is trine Jupiter (which I understand are the softest planets) accounts for it. I have made a mess of my life; it's a joke, on me. I do not cry any more, but did spend whole nights crying. If I had been more firm with my sister and not let her share everything I had, would this fellow and I have made a go of it? We had so many things in common.

A sour old maid,

M. LEC.

(Reply:) Let me set you straight on your horoscope before we go farther. If you have given me the right data, your Uranus is not trine your Moon but semi-sextile to it; neither Uranus nor the Moon is sextile Neptune (there is no aspect, but Uranus is approaching opposition and the Moon approaching quincunx) and your Neptune is pretty far away from a trine to Jupiter, for the latter is the faster mover and is already ten degrees past the trine. Apparently some uninformed and incompetent student undertook to set up your chart. However, you don't need the aspects you thought you had to account for your liking of a "soft job," for this is one of the typicalities of the sign Libra, in which your Sun is placed; that is, it is typical of Libra natives only until they evolve beyond it.

To one unacquainted with astrology, it might seem inexplicable that you continued to live with your sister beyond the first of these experiences with her which you describe. But looking at it through the eyes of astrological philosophy, we see that you were born with one of the configurations which denote debts owed to women—Moon conjunction Saturn. Women having this configuration at birth will experience through their lives relations with other women which take from them. They will be required to make some kind of restitution in the form of responsibility, service, sacrifice, to their own sex: which necessity they incurred in some previous relations with women.

Your sister was born with her Sun conjunct this karmic Saturn of yours. This alone shows us that you would discharge at least part of your necessity through her. And the other astrological vibrations that stirred you to do this and to continue to do it were her Venus conjunction your Moon (two feminine planets attracting each other), her Venus trine your Venus (the same) and your two Suns in trine. This harmony enabled you to go on living with her and letting her "share everything you had," as you put it.

If you are interested, you will find some of this closely knit attraction, or harmony, in your two charts and the lawyer's. His Mars (masculine planet) falls conjunction your Moon (feminine planet) causing sex attraction; but note that his Mars also falls conjunction your sister's Venus, with the same effect. His Moon (his relations with women) conjuncts your Venus—but it also trines your sister's Venus! Your sister's Moon falls on his Sun; but here the three-way harmony ends, for his Sun falls conjunction your Uranus, and that would account for the sudden (Uranus) disruption and break (Uranus) which you experienced in your relation with him.

If you were to marry this particular man, I believe that your close relations with your sister would continue to influence the marriage; and it might be that the incipient attraction between her and the lawyer would either continue, or would grow up again at some time. That, however, you should not regard with finality; there is the factor of free will in every situation. It would happen, probably, if you were not sufficiently wise—and I do not mean clever, smart, cunning—to handle the situation rightly.

As to your leaving town, you may leave or stay, at your free will choice, of course. If you stay, certain experiences will come your way; if you leave and choose another location, you will invoke other experiences. That is the only difference. There is nowhere you could go on the surface of this earth where you would leave behind the necessities of this life of yours. These necessities are many and varied; and under nature's laws you will encounter all of them at one time or another. By moving you can postpone certain of them and take on certain others; that is all.

Think over your decision in this light. Then leave town if you wish. Or stay and work out the difficulties you now know.

"Perhaps it was meant to be; I am trying to follow my stars." Do not let what has here been said lead you to the conclusion that you are fated to allow your sister to do anything she chooses and you do nothing. That would be an error in itself; for you would be shirking your responsibility to another if you continued to condone her wrongdoing. No, that is not fated. Your responsibility to her consists in learning the lesson she, as nature's instrument, is now teaching you, and trying in your turn to teach her why her attitude and acts are wrong. Not forcefully, but by example. First, talk it over with her in the light of reason and tolerance, but definitely. If she feels any real regret or shame, you two can work it out together. If she does not, your role is gentle but definite withdrawal from her temporarily, but in no spirit of finality or condemnation, because then you would have cut yourself off from any further chance to teach or guide her; and when, in the future, she does come to regret, the way must be open for her to continue relationship with you.

In the same spirit, you would be wise not to resent personally the role the lawyer has played in your life; for he, too, is an instrument of nature's law, and your resentment is preventing you from assimilating what the experience (and the others like it) have for you in the way of garnered knowledge and eventual wisdom. If we do not at the time take to heart the import of our experiences, then we are under necessity to live through another experience quite similar later on. If we do understand our experiences, digest them and make them part of us by realization, then that particular part of our necessities is put behind us. Please begin now to notice the heavy accent in your life on emotional irresponsibility. Your sister has faced you with it, and you say that most or all of your men friends have faced you with it. Why? Did you stop to wonder why all this repetition of accent on the identical experience? Obviously it is no accident. In your past was the free will choice that made it necessary that you learn very thoroughly why emotional irresponsibility is wrong and undesirable. And you are now learning that very thing. You do not like it; but nevertheless if you were to be faced with an "opportunity" to be emotionally irresponsible yourself tomorrow, something would hold you back. What? these very experiences. Do you see their value, through and in spite of your feelings at present?

The Health Chart

Dear Wynn: In the past three years I have had numerous occasions to use your monthly Health Chart for All—I have used it for both little and big decisions concerning the health of myself, members of my immediate family and in some instances, relatives and neighbors. It has a remarkable percentage of accuracy, much higher than one would suspect from a magazine feature that could not possibly be prepared for individual use—so I presume the few failures could be scientifically explained by the individual cases where it failed or partially failed.

I write this letter to ask for some information concerning how the white, gray and black days are arrived at, for I didn't go to the newsstands early enough last month to get WYNN'S before it was sold out and felt very much at a loss on two occasions because of not having the health chart to refer to. I have an ephemeris and can see that there is some combination of lunar and planetary influences taken into consideration, but cannot be sure of the method. If you do not consider it a professional secret, please let me know.

INQUIRING STUDENT

(Reply:) The health chart is a pictured version of some of the oldest and most tested rules of therapeutic astrology—but by no means all of them. They are the dominants and are offered as a guide to the majority of physical ailments; they can be applied to some extent also to non-physical imbalances, but should be so used only with considerable astrological understanding of the relationship between unseen causes and their objective effects.

Here are the laws which dictate the formation of the chart each month:

Said Ptolemy: "Pierce not with iron that part of the body ruled by the sign in which the Moon is found at the time." This applies equally to treatment that is drastic, as well as to operations. The chief reason for this rule is that the Moon is so powerful an agent for growth that when its stimulus is given to a part presided over by the sign it is in added growths are likely to develop where the cut is made. This is something that has ever been, and will ever be, a mystery to the non-astrological surgeon, for he can never understand why he will have foreign growths in some of his cases and not in others, although the same technique and the same part of the body is involved (he doesn't appreciate the differences in the vibrations at different times). These added growths are often referred to as "complications."

So the sign occupied by the Moon is blackened in the chart. Reference to the daily ephemeris in the calendar pages will show that the exact same times and signs are used in the diagonal series of rectangles on the chart.

Jupiter, too, is likely to produce added growths if the part of the body ruled by its sign is "pierced with iron" (operated upon, or treated too strenuously). Jupiter, it is said, is a great healing agent, but it does its best work from a distance; that is, by aspect rather than conjunction. The reason for this is that the ailment is shown by some planetary position in the horoscope that indicates sensitivity to the ailment; it is a weak spot that gives way when overwork, indulgence or exposure drains the vitality below normal.

One of the best illustrations of this uncovering of weakness that I ever witnessed was when a party of untrained hikers (including myself) climbed a mountainous trail for twenty miles one day. At the end of the trail every one of us had something the matter with us as a result of the unusual effort—but it wasn't the same complaint with each of us.

THIRD HOUSE STUFF

One thought it perfectly natural that his feet hurt; he had been walking on them, hadn't he? But the next had a headache—"Every time I go past my normal expenditure of strength, I get my old neuralgia" was the perfectly logical explanation of this man, whose feet weren't bothering him a bit. Another couldn't eat supper—his stomach had turned over or something, and he wasn't at all surprised: he knew it would and never should have tried this long a hike. One woman of the party knew she would never be able to return the following day because her hip joints were in flames—she could hardly move when she attempted to rise after resting an hour. With me personally, it was my back, which I had injured some years before—unless I approach strenuous physical exertion by easy stages of training, I get it right in the opposition to my Sun, which is in Aquarius (the opposition being Leo, which rules the spine).

It does not always require a visible or immediate cause to uncover weakness. The cause may be some bad habit of thought or emotion that has been contributing little by little for years—and then, when a major planet transits the sensitive spot which has thus been made weak by the mode of living, thinking or feeling, the effect hits us. Had we lived, thought and used our emotions as we should, the same transit over the same planet or configuration in our nativity wouldn't have produced the negative effect, for we would not have weakened ourselves.

The chief planets that uncover our weaknesses, in addition to the Moon, are Saturn, Jupiter and Mars. Saturn acts by cold, exposure and congestion, slowing down our function in that part of the body indicated by Saturn's occupancy, if we have weakened it. Saturn is the tester of everything it meets (transits). It challenges all the departments of our life as it slowly circles the orbit of the twelve signs, taking up each and every factor in our existence, meting out justice according to our performance. Most of us call it by some name other than justice—it has even been called "hard luck"—for unless we are more wise than the average person, we don't particularly yearn for what we have coming to us as the result of what we have done, thought and felt.

Thoughts and feelings are often more productive of illness than faulty diet. Some folks who live absolutely blameless lives at the dinner table, never even tasting strychnine on toast, ptomaine sandwiches or poison ivy salad, still have all the symptoms and discomforts of indigestion—and the reason is that they aren't kind to their close relatives. This may be a cause-effect relationship that can't be physically trailed like footprints in the snow, but those who insist that nothing exists unless you can take a photograph of it will continue to look upon nine-tenths of their nervous short circuits and emotional malfunctions as the mysterious and unpredictable peculiarities of a jealous and unreasonable "God".

When Mars stirs up a weak spot in us, the result is usually inflammatory, feverish, dry hotness. Mars is always dry and hot, but when it goes over our strong spots we do not notice it: our inner balance takes care of it. This planet, like all planets, is constantly going around the circle, making the rounds of every part of the human body, like Jupiter and Saturn, showing up the weak spots in its own characteristic manner.

The question may well be asked: Why shouldn't we treat or operate on a condition when it is manifest—one wouldn't be expected to operate or treat if there were no discomfort, would one?

The answers to this are several:

Most operations are not necessary. An operation is always a shock to the entire system—a completely healthy man would be definitely reduced in vitality if operated on to remove his gall bladder, appendix or other part, no less than if shot or stabbed. It is therefore wise to operate on an already vitally depleted person only in situations of grave emergency.

In the majority of cases, the situation of grave emergency was a long time getting to be that way. Proper modes of living would have prevented the person from arriving at such a state at all (extending this principle back into previous lives, for some of our present effects are definitely the result of former bad living and consequent Karma).

Nature's laws of health will do wonders for us if we don't interfere with them. Our medicines are rarely cures. It has been said by high medical authority that drugs can do only three things: intensify, retard and mask the cycle of ailment when once it has begun. Therefore, if this be true (and it probably is true), most medical treatment is an added burden on the resources of our physical economy—necessary at times, of course, to effect concentration of our forces at the point of malignancy—but never without consequences in the rest of our powers. If we can possibly do so, the best way in the long run is to permit nature to effect the return of balance by correcting our faulty living habits: change diet, improve balance of exercise and rest, eliminate extremes of all kinds. Most of us, however, want to swallow a magic pill and feel good while continuing our violations of nature's laws.

One more astrological law is involved in our monthly Health Chart.

It is the law that produces a minor horoscope (of the case) when operation or treatment is begun. The Moon is chief significator in such horoscope. If it be in a double-bodied sign (Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius or Pisces), there is almost certainty that repetition will follow: the operation will have to be done again, or the ailment will recur after a period of apparent cure.

Gathering these factors together, we can easily see why it is unwise to start or change things concerning an ailment when the Moon is in a double sign—therefore we indicate the entire period as doubtful for any part of the body at such time as the Moon is so located by the horizontal gray.

The vertical gray indicates the presence of Jupiter, Saturn or Mars in the sign.

When two grays overlap, the part of the body indicated is made black to show that there is more than one reason for postponing drastic action in that part.

These notes are in no way to be understood as covering the subject, for all the other planets are to be taken into consideration if making judgment on delicate situations—and each individual case is in some way different from all others, according to the horoscope and history of the person involved. But the Health Chart as published here monthly gives the more obvious general influences at work in all our lives. The student can apply the same laws, according to the natures and rulerships of the planets, to any case that is before him.

If you are interested in the health branch of astrology, get all you can of what has been written on the subject, but—BUT don't accept anything as being correct until you have proven it, for much has yet to be done before this or any other science arrives at a state of perfection. Seek principles, laws. You will find much in Paracelsus and Culpepper that will be of value. Most of modern texts are derived from the works of those two students. You may locate fragments of Paracelsus in your public library or in the used book stores; ask for the works of Franz Hartmann. You may find an original Culpepper's HERBAL in the same places.

Fun with a Table of Houses

Dear Wynn: I have been setting up horoscopes for two years and have just come to the realization that I don't know anything at all about what a house is. I get the Sidereal Time for a nativity and then copy out the corresponding cusps from the Table of Houses, but I don't have any mental picture of what it is. I have been reading all the serious astrological magazines and have vaguely obtained the impression that a house is three-dimensional; also, from your remarks concerning Saturn rising and setting, I see that a planet's body can be on one side of a cusp while its zodiacal position is on the other. All this is delightfully unsatisfactory to one who would like to have a mental grasp of what a horoscope really is. Where can I find this information? NEW SUBSCRIBER (Reply:) The information you seek is more or less to be found in various text books, a portion here and another portion there. As complete a presentation as I have seen in one place is in Alan Leo's CASTING THE HOROSCOPE, where you will find a good drawing of the sphere and the factors that produce the houses of the horoscope, together with lucid explanation. This volume is to be had from all good occult book stores, or any book store can obtain it for you. Also, try the second hand dealers.

There is much you can learn from study of a Table of Houses, such as the one in the back of your ephemeris.

Numerous methods for dividing the sphere have been offered by astrological students, but the one most accepted today by informed practitioners is the semi-arc method of Placidus. This is the one you find in Raphael's Ephemeris and Tables of Houses, as well as in nearly all other publications.

THIRD HOUSE STUFF

Semi-arc means half-arc. This method becomes easy to perceive when we think of the Sun along its zodiacal path from day to day. On any particular day the Sun is in approximately the same degree of the zodiac, for its daily motion is about one degree along the ecliptic (zodiac). It has a day arc and a night arc; these are called diurnal and nocturnal arcs. The day arc is from the moment the Sun rises at the eastern horizon of a place until it sets at the western horizon of the same place, measured in time or distance along the circle (Sidereal Time and the degrees and minutes that measure R.A. are the same thing in different scales of counting).

For instance, on March 21st the Sun is in the first degree of Aries. This is the equinox, or time of the year when we have equal days and nights, or a solar day arc of 12 hours and a solar night arc of 12 hours. At this time, stating the same fact in another way, the Sun is above the horizon for 12 hours and below the horizon for 12 hours. Let's see how this fact is shown in the Table of Houses.

Opening to the Table of Houses for the latitude of New York City (40°43' N), we find Aries 0° at ST 18 00 00 on the ascendant, or eastern horizon. Now we know that it takes just 12 hours for this point to go up over the midheaven and down the other side of the heavens to the western horizon, for that is what the Sun does when it is in that degree every year, so we add 12 hours to 18 and get 6 (30 minus the 24-hour circle)—the Table of Houses had better be right on this point, for we know what it ought to be: Aries 0° should be setting (Libra 0° rising is the same thing, for opposite points of the zodiac rise and set at the same moment). And what do we find? We find Libra 0° rising (on the ascendant) at ST 6 00 00! Just what it should be. The Table is right.

We know something else about this point: we know that just half-way between sunrise and sunset (on any day) the Sun is at the midheaven (10th cusp, or MC). So Aries 0° had better be on the 10th in the Table 6 hours after it rises on that day—18 plus 6 equals 24, or the beginning of the circle at ST 0 00 00. What do we find? At ST 0 00 00 Aries 0° is at the 10th! The Table is correct again.

That shows us what a semi-arc is. 6 hours is the semi-arc of 12 hours.

What have we here?

We have the division of the sphere into four quadrants, measured in parts of a 24-hour day. All time is measured on the Earth's equator, one complete turn of the Earth on its axis (north-south pole) being the 24-hour circle. Any angle can be measured in proportion of the 24 hours or in proportion of the 360° circle. Thus one-quarter of one equals one-quarter of the other: 6 hours is the same as 90°.

This demonstrates that when it is in Aries 0°, the Sun takes 6 hours to go 90° from the ascendant (eastern horizon) to the midheaven.

We therefore say that the semi-arc of Aries 0° is 90° or 6 hours of ST. When we say "semi-arc" we mean Diurnal Semi-Arc (DSA); if we meant Nocturnal Semi-Arc (NSA), we would say it completely: "nocturnal semi-arc".

A house is one-third of a quadrant (or one-twelfth of the entire sphere, which is the same thing). It is as though the sphere were a big watermelon and we were cutting it up into twelve parts. That should give you the three-dimensional concept. But let's go back to Aries 0° for another fact.

One-third of the distance from the eastern horizon to the midheaven ought to bring us to the 12th cusp. We know it takes this zodiacal point 6 hours to go through the entire quadrant, so it should require 2 hours (one-third of 6) to go one-third of the distance (arc). In other words, if Aries 0° is on the 1st cusp at ST 18 00 00, it should be on the 12th cusp at 20 00 00. So we look in the table for this ST and there it is! We can ignore the few seconds of ST, for our table is made with the midheaven as its basis and the other cusps are given for the nearest degree when the indicated point (full degree) is at the midheaven.

Add another third of the semi-arc of Aries 0° and get ST 22 00 00. Presto! There is our point on the 11th cusp.

And so on, all around the circle. Remember to take the point opposite Libra 0° when you want to find the ST of Aries 0° on the right hand side of the chart. For instance: at ST 2 00 00, Aries 0° is on the 9th cusp; this is shown in the table as Libra 0° on the 3rd (opposite the 9th) cusp. Every 2 hours added shows this point on the cusp of the next house; this is because 2 hours is 1/3 of the semi-arc of Aries 0°.

The only other point on the zodiac that has the same semi-arc is Libra 0° , to which the same facts apply.

How about the other degrees of the circle?

The same principle works perfectly, but the figures, or measurements, differ.

One of the easiest ways to see this is in the seasons, with their consequent inequalities of day and night—again we use the Sun as our demonstrator.

We all know that the Sun at the beginning of summer is above the horizon longer than at any other time of the year. The beginning of summer is when the Sun is in Cancer 0° . Therefore, the SA (semi-arc) of Cancer 0° should be considerably greater than that of Aries 0° .

To find the SA of a zodiacal point, from its ST when on the 10th subtract its ST when at the ascendant.

In the table for the latitude of New York City we find that Cancer 0° is at the 10th when the ST is $6^{\text{h}}00^{\text{m}}00^{\text{s}}$ and that it rises (is on the ascendant) at ST $22^{\text{h}}32^{\text{m}}$ approximately. Calling the first figure 30 hours (we must add the circle of 24 hours when the number to be subtracted is greater), we find that the difference is $7^{\text{h}}28^{\text{m}}$ —the semi-arc of Cancer 0° .

One-third of this SA is $2^{\text{h}}29^{\text{m}}$. Let's add it to the time when Cancer 0° is on the 1st cusp and see if it produces the ST when the same point is on the 12th cusp. $22:32$ plus $2:29$ equals $1:01$ (dropping the 24-hour circle), and at approximately this ST in the table we find our point on the 12th cusp. The slight difference is in a combination of the midheaven basis for the table and the fact that our third of the semi-arc is a little more than $2:29$.

You can do this with any degree of any sign, around the entire circle—but be sure your NSA is figured from the 1st to 4th, or from 4th to 7th cusps.

The Table of Houses is calculated for the ecliptic (Sun's path) only, and planets can be north or south of this line (see celestial latitude in your ephemeris for all planets—the Sun has none because it is always on its own path).

All the houses for any given latitude taper down to a point at both the north and south, all coming together on the horizon of the place at the northernmost and southernmost points of that horizon. Remember your watermelon slices, or the segments of an orange.

There! That may not be a complete dissertation on the subject of houses (and it isn't), but it may serve to stimulate your further interest, and give you something to go on. You will probably want more information concerning declination and celestial latitude. Get Simmonite or Pearce for further explanations.

Minor Inspiration

Dear S. K. B.: I have made the belated discovery that experience is important, not so much for what it costs in mind or money as for what it reveals in explanation of character.

R. H. O.

(Comment:) Very good. This is evidence of application and contemplation, with the inevitable resultant inspiration.

Too many of us miss our minor inspirations while hoping for major and somewhat sudden unfoldment into what it is hoped will be universal wisdom. But we do not grow that way—we grow by small, often infinitesimally small, steps of added realizations, all of which are minor inspiration. The prolonged accumulation of these minor appreciations produces in the end the perfection which all sincere students are seeking.

Signs, Planets, Elements and the Alphabet

Some time ago I purchased sight unseen all the occult books of someone's library; I heard about them through a dealer and have no notion as to the identity of the former owner. In this collection of about seventy volumes was one of problematic value, purporting to be a translation of one of the works of Henry Cornelius Agrippa, called PHILOSOPHY OF NATURAL MAGIC, edited by Willis F. Whitehead, published in 1897 by Ernest Loomis and Company, New York City.

On page 220 of this book is a cut that looks as though it might be from some time of the Middle Ages; the text says it "is from the English edition of 1651". This cut is in tabular form and allocates the Hebrew, Greek, Roman and an unknown (to me)

THIRD HOUSE STUFF

alphabets to the zodiac, planets and elements as follows (I give only the Roman alphabet with which most of us are familiar):

Consonants	Other consonants
B Aries	K Earth
C Taurus	Q Water
D Gemini	X Air
F Cancer	Z Fire
G Leo	H Aether
L Virgo	Vowels
M Libra	A Saturn
N Scorpio	E Jupiter
P Sagittarius	I Mars
R Capricorn	O Sun
S Aquarius	U Venus
T Pisces	Y, J Mercury
	W, V Moon

I hold no brief for these allocations, but there are some interesting things about it. I find no instructions as to their use and offer the whole thing for the reader's further study and research.

It is well known that the ancients took their infants' horoscopes to the wise men for naming, and that the wise men prepared names from the elements of the nativity, possibly with some such keys to celestial and sound vibrations as are intimated by this table.

That it is intended to be used with the letters in cold type or written on paper is very doubtful, for spelling out of proper names in this key leaves much to be desired or which is unaccounted for. For instance:

Name	Sign	Planet	Element
A		Saturn
D	Gemini
O		Sun
L	Virgo
F	Cancer
H			Aether
I		Mars
T	Pisces
L	Virgo
E		Jupiter
R	Capricorn

Some of that layout looks fairly good: Saturn is the planet at his midheaven, the Sun and Mars are in his 7th (war) house. But he has nothing of great import indicated by Virgo, Cancer or Pisces. Perhaps he was named wrongly in addition to his other imperfections.

Fortune Telling

Dear Wynn: Three days ago I was wandering aimlessly around a certain corner, killing time until the hour of an appointment, when I saw a sign in a window which urged me to come in and spend twenty-five cents for a "psychic astrological reading." Thus tempted in a weak moment, I succumbed to the lure and climbed the dusty steps to the room indicated on the sign.

I was soon ushered into the presence of a middle-aged man who bade me take a chair opposite him. He asked me my birthday, which I gave, without mentioning the year or birthplace, expecting nothing but a Sun-sign interpretation. The moment he heard it he named the proper zodiacal sign and rattled off an explanation of why it was the most important of all the twelve great divisions of the heavens. This required perhaps two minutes and was the end of all the astrology he had to offer.

His next act was to bring out a deck of cards which he asked me to cut into three piles—which I did. Then he laid them out and began telling me how absolutely grand and glorious my entire future was going to be. The thing I disliked most about this was his constantly referring to the cards as my "chart" and his remarks as "astrology" and all the while telling me how scientific he and astrology were—as though I had ever breathed a word against either him or the subject. I recalled the words of the Good Book, which sayeth that "the evil flee when no man pursueth." And didn't one of Shakespeare's characters comment: "Methinks thou doth protest too much"?

The whole performance was pretty shoddy and a disgrace to common sense as well as to the truly scientific efforts being made in behalf of intelligent understanding of astral vibrations by yourself and other students.

But—and here's the rub:

The old scallywag, while gazing intently at the pattern of cards before him, suddenly looked up and asked, "Have you a brother?" I answered in the affirmative. "You are going to hear from him soon concerning travel," he stated. My brother is older than I am and not subject to the draft; he lives just about as far from here as he could get and be on the same continent.

So yesterday I received a letter from my brother informing me that he had moved to his present address, which is more than a thousand miles from where I thought he was.

What do you make of it?

HENRY H.

(Reply:) While I wish we could get everyone to have a clear distinction between astrology and those who would use its name and terms for their other practices, I have been forced to recognize the existence of a power to make accurate predictions.

It is undoubtedly related to psychic intuition, it is largely uncontrolled—those who have it are not able to distinguish between the real and false impressions they receive in many instances—but it does exist. It usually consists of perception of only the very near future, a couple of days at most—often much less: hours, minutes. One of my relatives was once visiting a friend named Mrs. Chalden. For some unperceived reason, Mrs. Chalden suddenly got up and said, "Let's go over to the Fair and have our fortunes told." They were only a few blocks from the Fair Grounds, so my relative didn't demur too strongly, although she did say she didn't believe in that sort of thing. They both had their fortunes told, Mrs. Chalden being last. As she was leaving, the fortune teller said very earnestly, "Oh, lady, I wish you didn't have to go away!" "What do you mean?" asked Mrs. C. "That's all I can say—I don't know." Within thirty minutes, Mrs. C. had been struck by an auto and instantly killed.

Another case, part of the radio series on extrasensory perception sponsored by Zenith a few years ago, was claimed by them to be completely authenticated. As I recall it, there was a railroad station agent in a small town who called the local hospital in the middle of the night, urging that all the ambulances, nurses and doctors rush immediately to a point about ten miles up the line. All available equipment and personnel was routed out and speeded to the station for further details before proceeding to the scene of the disaster. The chief physician asked, "Where is the wreck?" "It hasn't happened yet, but it's going to," replied the station agent, indicating a remote point between there and the next town. The doctor was disgusted and spoke his mind about the whole thing, ordering all back to the hospital. Before they could start back, however, the call came in from the indicated spot that the wreck had occurred. The fact that all that equipment and talent was already on the way saved several lives. The station agent had seen it happen, as in a vision, together with the time of the wreck on a clock—it was so powerful that he believed it and acted accordingly, for, although it had not yet occurred, he realized it was too late to send warning to the train at the previous town.

The explanation of such prediction is related to psychic sensitivity, plus the fact that nothing occurs without cause. Causes are set in motion before effects occur, whether the time be long or short. There are all kinds of sensitivity to these causes. A crude type is that of physical observation: anyone seeing an unmanned truck rolling downhill straight toward a shack full of dynamite knows in advance of the explosion that it is going to happen; his imagination can put together a very accurate picture of what it will look like when it does happen; he can shout to warn men on the other side of the shack who do not see the truck coming.

Those who are consciously psychic can perceive similar causes in motion just before they break out into effect, because when the cause is "ripe" and ready to manifest it is almost existent as the event. Manly P. Hall gives an illustration of this in the experience of a watchmaker who hung his small springs, gears and other parts of tiny timepieces by means of magnets on the wall by his workbench. Everything went along all right for years; but one day he was dismayed to see all his stock fall from the magnets and scatter all over the floor. Something had demagnetized the magnets and while he was wondering what it could have been that did it, he found himself in the midst of an earthquake. That was a long time ago in Japan and was the forerunner of Japan's earthquake warning system—it consists of a large iron ball suspended from a magnet over a gong. When the impending quake demagnetizes the support of the ball it falls on the gong and all the natives dash for the bamboo groves (the safest place in an earthquake). A psychic person can sense such demagnetizing through his own perceptive faculties—and often much that is far less physical than a magnetic current or its stoppage.

The more psychically sensitive the person

THIRD HOUSE STUFF

the further ahead can he perceive the effects of causes already set in motion; perhaps the most remarkable of sensitives who ever wrote his impressions was Nostradamus, who derived his long range predictions from a combination of astrology, use of a tripod and other forms of concentration toward the desired end.

But let's not jump the logical gap between these startling and somewhat isolated facts to the conclusion that anyone who sets up as a seer really is one. We are much better off with students of astrology who have no peculiar abilities along psychic lines, who have to build careful judgments concerning the visible positions and the known influences of zodiacal and planetary vibrations. These judgments, it may be said, are to some extent gifts possessed in greater or less degree by different individuals—but they are built on solid foundations of study and gradual unfoldment of experience.

Peace Blindness

In THIS WEEK, issue of December 13, 1942, we read:

"We concluded then and there," writes Donald W. Douglas concerning the great efforts of the aircraft industry in meeting President Roosevelt's quotas, "that the only way to deliver this fabulous fleet on time was to pool everything we had—materials, machines, manpower and know-how. We set up a corporation which we called Aircraft War Production Council, Inc., and through it we made available to each factory every engineering and aerodynamics study any of our technicians had made. Some of these were costly research jobs that represented years of work. One that I know about ran over a million dollars. For the duration, it became available to anyone in the industry at no expense. We no longer had trade secrets from one another or from anyone else building war planes for the United Nations. While the war lasts, our only competitors are Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito. When the dictators are finally bombed off this Earth, we shall become rugged individualists and rivals again. But until then, we are an army of hundreds of thousands of aircraft workers with one aim only—victory."

Read those last two sentences again.

They sound wonderful—now.

But in them is the promise that the aircraft industry hasn't learned any lesson of the war, if Mr. Douglas' opinion is shared by other plane manufacturers. And it probably is, for he doesn't seem at all fearful of contradiction. They do not realize that competitions, rugged individualisms, rivalries, trade secrets and other popular practices of the same ilk were the causes of this war; they are pleasantly awaiting the "peace" when they will again be privileged to put into motion the causes of the next war, just as all of us have done before.

Little peace wars (called competition, the life of trade) make big war wars.

This is the old astrological, philosophical principle of duality, man's ever present power of choice. In the 7th, war, house it is the choice between competition and cooperation. When will we learn?

had no idea of actually coming to grips with Britain and France, and history would have had to be rewritten if their hesitation and fear had not played into his hands and helped him to carry through his bluff. In the war declaration charts of both countries there was more aggressor-strength than in Hitler's—but it was either not recognized or the "destiny that shape our ends" was not ready to stay the hand of discipline. For the tense moment, we have to set it down to the triumph of the active Hitler mind over the lethargic pall that had settled over the rest of the world.

Space does not permit the long line of Key Cycles that have written a more accurate history—and a far more illuminating prophecy—than has been vouchsafed us by way of press or radio, but there are two remaining ones that should not be overlooked in the chain of evidence by which you can so well profit in your own events.

The armistice with fallen France was signed on June 22nd, 1940. The KC chart is more prophetic than that of the "birth" of the armistice itself at 5:22 pm—for it is the Key Cycle that ties in Hitler and the Germans with the destiny of France and testifies to the changes to come.

Just 63 days after his 51st birthday and the stormy Solar Return that pictured the year ahead, Hitler completed the humiliation of a great nation by a childish and spectacular insistence that the "Peace" be signed at Compiègne, in the coach of Marshal Foch, where the French-German treaty was signed in 1919. The KC shows him in complete command of a dramatic situation—with Jupiter, ruler of the M.C., in the House of Possessions (2nd). Uranus and Neptune share rulership of the 1st and Neptune is in the 7th (relations with others), whose cusp is Leo—the sign of France—and whose ruler, the Sun, is in the End of the Matter (4th).

It is an old astrological rule for all temporary charts that if the ruler of the 1st is in the 7th, you are in the hands of the other fellow—ultimately. In the case of Neptune it may be long in materializing—but it is sure—and France and her friends are willing to wait. When Jupiter enters Leo in 1943, France will begin to see the end of her long trek through Gehenna and we shall be able to look forward to a German-free France and a speedy restoration of her glory.

The Moon, ruler of the 5th (the joy of living) and the 6th (armed forces), is in the 12th—where Hitler has kept the people it symbolizes. The S. Node is properly in the 1st—his point of self-undoing. Mercury, the planet of change, rules the 4th and is co-ruler of the 7th—which is where we look for France—posited in the 6th, with Mars conjunct. Mars rules the 2nd and the 9th and warlike strategy (Mercury-conjunct-Mars) from foreign lands (9th) is to bring about the End (Mercury ruler of the 4th) that will free France from the tyrants within and without. We are already seeing the working out of this KC promise—which Hitler and his advisers might have seen for themselves if they had not begun to slip astrologically.

Another prophetic KC may be erected for December 11th, 1941, when Germany declared war on the United States. An illuminating article on this declaration appeared in Wynn's Magazine for February, 1942, giving the Key Cycles for Washington and Berlin. Let us look briefly at the KC of Hitler and what it promised for him and his.

Gemini is on the ascendant—changes to come—and Gemini is the war sign of the United States. Mercury, ruler of the chart, is in the 6th—the house of the armed forces. Uranus rules the M.C. in the 19th degree of Aquarius, trine to Hitler's Uranus in Libra. Violence by surprise stands at the top of the chart—and the ruler itself is in the 12th—the house of sabotage and 5th column activity, in conjunction with Saturn, ruler of the 8th (death) and 9th (foreign affairs). In the 10th house stands the S. Node in Neptune's sign, herald of self-undoing through delusions of expansion (Neptune). The ruler of the 1st is also ruler of the self-expressional 5th (which includes colonies) and here Neptune is posited. Hitler is not only fooling himself by the various poses he assumes and his denial of any and all defeat, but he has little to expect but deceit and double-dealing from his colonies. Jupiter rules the 7th—in this case the United States—and Jupiter is rising in the secret 12th. We have at our command our own secret weapons—and secret protections—which fall in Hitler's natal 8th, as do also the planets he is counting on, Saturn and Uranus. The Sun, well past the trine to his natal Saturn, is applying to that 7th cusp and rules the "End of the Matter"—for the 7th house. Venus, in the 9th, ruler of the 5th and 12th, is climbing to a square of Hitler's natal Mars-Venus, which was exact before the year ran out, as Mars opposed his Uranus (natal) and conjoined his Mercury.

Gemini was on the 4th cusp at the armistice with France and the Sun was in the 4th house; in the Declaration KC against the United States, Gemini was on the 1st, with the Sun ruling the 4th. There is no uncertainty as to the outcome—and in the interim, the great certainly lies in the "Changes". Saturn, who always has the last word, rules the 12th KC for France, the 8th for us—and it matters little which of the two will operate in Hitler's final exit.

And the moral is back from where it started: set up your Key Cycles and know the best or the worst—and how to deal with it; if it isn't what you want or need—and you have the reins in your own hands—choose the time and place when you will be helped and not hindered—when the final outcome will have the blessing you deserve.

The Year Ahead for AQUARIUS

If You Were Born January 20 - February 18

Thinking of yourself as you were on your last birthday, about a year ago, brings back a person who didn't know as much about his or her feelings and affections as he or she does now—doesn't it? This past year which is closing with your birthday has stirred such things up and brought them to recognition, and in some cases to climaxes, hasn't it? Somehow, until the moment when the way we felt in the past, and the things we said, and certain things we did, come back to us in the form of immediate experiences, we don't really remember them; and in the twelve months closing for you some of these past factors did come to a head, did appear suddenly, and did present some kind of a problem. Well, you are in better command of your love and emotional life at this minute than you were, aren't you? Yes, even though you have got that way through a few experiences that you had to think and work your way through. You feel a certain sense of power and stability, power to handle any more changes that the future may bring.

And the future will bring them. For Uranus, the planet of change and growth, stays on in that 5th house of yours for more years yet. Its past and present companion, Saturn, which has been doing the crystallizing and reviving, will also continue in your 5th for the twelve months ahead—it does not leave until June of 1944. This continuing stimulation is a very personal thing to you, as you don't need me to tell you, Uranus being your own Sun dispositor: you feel it keenly in your very personal life attitudes. And through Saturn the most personal and intimate things you are and feel, your own deep down inner life, is coming gradually but surely into your external emotional life. You may have thought all this was your own business; you may have thought your emotional secrets safe; you may have put certain things away in your subconscious and considered them done with; but ah no, not under the present rays from Saturn. They have been rising again, and will continue to do so; and, further, you really don't mind it, for slowly it is relieving you of some hidden emotional burdens, by making them matters of exchange with others, making them matters of your everyday life. Cooperate with Saturn: be willing to face the past again; be ready to go back to where things started and adjust and clean up, emotionally speaking. More power to you will then be literal.

Some new chance to adopt more ideal relations and attitudes in your love life will come up Feb. 8-March 11 and Oct. 15 to Feb. 13, 1944. Of course, this could mean a new face in your emotional picture. But not necessarily: it also gives impetus to a revival of aware affection for continuing faces, and it certainly will urge an increase of expression and demonstration in love life. You know what has not been perfect, complete, or wholly satisfactory to date: when these stretches appear, be ready with an effort toward your ideals.

And Jupiter. For the past year you have been feeling it in your 6th house, where it has taken many forms, as experience. In general, you have been preserved or favored or benefited in your working surroundings, and perhaps also through the people who work with you in those surroundings. You have made friends through your work, friends of influence, friends who have been and will be able to push you ahead or use their influence in your behalf. When you had to handle subordinates, you have found them easier to manage, and have been able to earn their good will in the end. Some of your hopes for your work have come nearer, or been achieved. You have a little more of this influence.

From July 1, 1943, Jupiter will be in and passing through your 7th house. With the current stirring up of your 5th house by Uranus-Saturn, when Jupiter enters your 7th you can certainly look forward to a strong stimulation of your desire for partnership. And if you aren't married at this writing, you may want to be, even strongly. More, you may marry. So to whisper in your ear won't be amiss: the whisper concerns your attitude toward partners currently. You could find it out yourself, but it might cost something, so allow yourself to be warned that your generous feelings, your real desire to give to and bestow upon and benefit others might, just might, be more on your side than theirs; you could empty yourself, speaking figuratively, only to find that you had surfeited or even embarrassed some one. So take the wise way, and hold yourself in from any extremes, thus allowing Jupiter the Preserver to perform the function it can in your alliances and partnerships.

And the same with business partnerships entered into, or already existing, at this time. And still the same in any legal affairs.

Persons who have been friends will now fall into the role of supporters, mediators, agents for you, will take your side and co-operate with more advantage to you.

From July 22 to Aug. 7 this year Jupiter in your 7th will sextile Uranus in your 5th, and the new emotional urges you feel could bring new results of a happy nature. A good stretch for considering matrimony. Old emotional situations, old emotional secrets, ties with the past, will come up in some good way Oct. 25-Nov. 13, and the next Feb. 5-29 (1944), when Jupiter is sextile Saturn.

From April 19 to Aug. 2 Neptune, which had entered your 9th house and the trine to your natal Sun, will retrograde back again into its familiar position in your 8th, where it was for approximately fourteen years of your life. During this retrogradation, then, some of the familiar factors in your sex life and in such of your finances as were mutual will reappear. Your mind will be receptive once more to occult subjects and impressions, perhaps forced thereto by some related experience. In matters of sex, you will again be brought close to the necessity to refine your attitude and values; or to face the termination of some experience, either by voluntary or involuntary renunciation. You will know what is meant; you have lived through much of this stimulation.

From August 3rd on Neptune will stay in your 9th house. Its continuing vibrations here will gradually, over a period of time, awaken more of your higher mind and consciousness. Perhaps, since the process is so gradual, you won't be very conscious of it; but if you want to be, keep a diary or the equivalent. Looking back at each birthday, you can be aware of what is happening. You will notice that you have more flashes of insight, from you don't know what source. You will recall that you did have certain hunches, proved true. You dreamed more or more truly. You may find that you will have "trouble" with your ideals, for you will give up, from time to time, certain thoughts, opinions, or things in favor of those ideals; but you won't regret it. Your choice of subjects to read about, take classes in, or seek training for, will change; for the better. Your intellect will sensitize and widen.

From now to March 8th Mars continues through your 12th house, and you will re-curringly want to declare what has been private. You won't feel in the mood for secrets, or working at things too privately. Especially Feb. 6-17, when Mars opposes Jupiter: you will be more than usually frank and direct; those you work with, or who look up to you, your friends, will draw you out. Avoid unwise extremes. March 1-9 Mars trines Uranus, which looks like a good time to turn over new emotional leaves, those freeing you inwardly. Mar. 2-9 Mars trines Neptune, too, making it more certain that something will eventuate of moment in your emotional picture, and continuing into a better future.

From March 9 to April 17th Mars proceeds through your Sun sign and first house. Always a time of extra impetuosity and enterprise, and sometimes a time of personal friction and quarrel; occasionally a time of threat of physical accident. Your mind sharpens and you take more initiative. March 9-18 Mars will trine Saturn and emotional and hidden things from the past will be brought out into action and decision—you may stir these things up voluntarily. You may elect to revive old and now neglected contacts. Affectional factors that need crystallizing and shedding will get it.

From April 18th to May 27th your finances will take on a Martian coloring, while the planet passes through your 2nd house. This means action on income and outgo; more attention to money, and more eagerness to earn it. More ambitious drive. More free spending too: see that it goes in the right ways. From April 14-20 Mars is square Uranus, and it looks as though pleasure and indulgence would drain finances, or that gambling would: any quick or premature decision will cost, especially if it involves new things. April 25-May 2 Mars squares Saturn: watch for financial factors unknown to you that stem from the past; and don't let long term commitments for pleasure or self-indulgence get started. But May 5-15 Mars comes trine to Jupiter, and now you are in line to realize some advantage of material nature from your work and services; your friends and fellow workers, or your employees, will be sources of gain too. May 14-26 Mars opposes Neptune, which means impracticality on your part and that of others in handling finances; fraud or dishonesty could be met.

From May 28th to July 7th Mars will be in your 3rd house. You will find yourself in the midst of local or neighborhood activity; and with more short moving around to do. Your mind will be keen and sharp, but discussion will be better for it, and you, than argument—don't contend, especially with close relatives. May 29-June 2 (Mars sextile Uranus) is excellent for capturing new ideas, especially those relating to your ambitions, occupation, and love life; turn over new leaves, make new attitudes live. June 15-20 Mars sextiles Saturn and you can put into practical form these new things; can take action on old plans and attitudes that need it. But June 30-July 10, while Mars is forming the square to Jupiter, be not led astray by the optimism or gullibility of either your partners, allies, friends or yourself; for this is not a practical stretch due to exaggerated values. Watch your fixed assets through here, and your legal affairs.

From July 8th to August 24th Mars will be felt in terms of your home and family, and through your estate. Action may be necessary in connection with your fixed assets and your occupation, but not impetuous action. For anything you do on impulse in this time will cause some kind of commotion, loss, or unpleasant situation in home, occupation, estate, and with family members. Mars is trine Neptune Aug. 14-24, bringing your way some larger opportunity involving your estate, home and occupation, and connected with distance or wider sphere of influence.

From Aug. 25th to March 28th, 1944, Mars remains in your 5th house, with Uranus and Saturn. Here is the most significant time of your year in regard to 5th house matters, already discussed in the forepart of this forecast. For Mars is action, and Mars rules the present, and in your love life, pleasures, affections, romances, and relations with children you will feel its stirring power. In your relations with those you already care for, you will find that you will now take the initiative. But there may come new emotional relations too during this time. If you are eligible for romance, go forth and seek it. Aug. 23 to Sept. 10, Dec. 1-30, and Jan. 11-17 are the appropriate times to seek new romances, and also to make something new of the old attachments, reviving their original happiness; for at these times Mars is conjoined with Uranus. If you yourself feel urged to make changes, and you see clearly how these reforms will better things, don't make the mistake of quickly resenting or condemning those for whom you care if they aren't so quick or so clear—remember it's your aspect, not theirs, and give them a chance to catch up. The periods when Mars conjuncts Saturn in your 5th will be Sept. 30-Oct. 28, and Feb. 12 to March 7, 1944. Through these times the old attachments, and attractions to persons older than yourself, will take on life and significance. Endeavor through here to rid yourself of inner fixations and secrets that bind or hold you; the time is ready.

It is not wise to go against a black day on this diagram. When day or part of day is gray, don't make changes concerning health unless there is a vital emergency. Do all possible to keep away from the black days under the sign ruling the affected part.

February, 1943, Opportunities

For those born Mar. 21-Apr. 19

Dear Aries:

The middle two weeks of this month will find you more ebullient, more enthusiastic, and more urgent to strike out in your own ways; from 7th to 21st of February this dynamic energy and drive which will be yours will communicate itself through your personality to others and will enable you to achieve some of your personal objectives. Try to bring such objectives to completion; especially regarding fixed assets, your home.

The first two weeks (1-14) will bring your way some pleasure or gain in connection with things unknown, confided information, or satisfactions of your own got through being alone or through being in seclusion and quiet. Other folks will be mediums through which your own inner life becomes more satisfactory. The first five of these days are conflicting, for some inhibition, some burden from your past, or some older person or superior, will seem to impede, while at the same time equals met at this time mean pleasure and gain. 3-9 the other sex will appeal, and can help forward some factor of your ambitions: perhaps confidentially. 10-14 some antagonist can be turned into an ally; and secret desires involving your home, travel, are nearer realization.

All month, but especially 6-21, put your mind to planning concretely your liberation from past burdens and your future activities; give your hopes a chance to become your plans. Look forward 6-16, backward 15-21.

There will be three (overlapping) periods in your February when external events and persons will provide the impetus which seems to move you involuntarily. 15-19 a friend, someone in your current environment, perhaps a stranger, will bring something new to your attention and may induce restlessness or force a quick change before its logical time. 20-25 some person or some problem in your occupation demands patience and more effort. 19-26 an emotional situation develops between yourself and an equal or partner, and depends for solution upon both becoming aware of the latent factors.

For those born Apr. 20-May 20

Dear Taurus:

This month finds you in a mood to welcome persons and events which take you beyond your accustomed circle. Both contacts with strangers, and new contacts with existing friends, will offer opportunity to your alert eyes. Looking toward the future, you may decide to take up lines of activity which are not at present your actual occupation, but will be avocations or hobbies for the time being. Continuous fluctuation of attitude and mood come your way in your February.

What appears to be the most promising stretch lies between 6th and 19th. Some larger outlet for your personal capabilities and activities can be distinguished: it may involve travel, or the attaining of more personal education, training, or culture. Friends and close relatives are involved. The influence of a partner or an equal looks to be what stirs your enthusiasm, and while this is good, don't get too enthusiastic to see the practical side, or so active or impetuous that you do too final things. 10-14 your personality and the impression you make upon others is magnetized; these are the days to make all the personal contacts you can, for they will stir up benefits.

It will be wise to be patient through the first five days, until financial obstacles, or temporary inability to see the constructive side, are passed. If you have a health problem in here, treat it with patience and time, not in an emotional way. Watch inferiors more closely. Again from 19th to 26th don't let feelings or misunderstandings produce problems in your work, with inferiors, or affect your well being: something will be hidden or not realized.

15-19 looks like a sudden new factor or an emergency in occupation and finance, or involving a superior. The pressure may seem to be entirely external. Your role is not to act or decide too fast, but to take time and temporize until you see your way clear ahead. 20-25 again affects money, and relations with those in authority: there is a current obstacle or problem, connected with the past.

February, 1943, Opportunities

For those born May 21-June 20

Dear Gemini:

In a personal way your month will work out more easily and harmoniously than it is apt to in ways that concern your efforts with others. You will feel that what you think, what you plan, what you arrange and believe, comes into being more effortlessly and with less friction than usual. Your personal mood will be one of more perspective and tolerance generally.

But there will be four distinct periods affecting your occupation and your ambitions that can produce need for effort. 1-5 your pleasures, or secret desires, stemming from your past, come up against a current, and possibly public, obstacle; an older woman brings about some termination; a personal responsibility in occupation weighs heavier. 15-19 there comes some urge to get away from the existent in your personal occupation; or you feel an unwise independence with a superior. The two next periods overlap: 19-26 and 20-25. The first is very emotional and probably upset; and if you allow, factors in your love life, friendships, or pleasures will count against your reputation and progress. The second tempts you to some very final decision over what looks like a personal loss or problem, perhaps involving your superiors, elders, and your occupation.

3-20 is a financial opportunity of some kind, both personal and in mutual finances. You will find that you could take in more, and that you are letting more go out also. Perhaps you will count only an evened score; but there is possibility that you can count a financial gain in these days. 5-6 a superior, an executive, a close relative, or some local person may help; 7-20 a friend, an inferior, may be the active source; 10-14 a woman, a loved one, or a confidential ally should be sought.

If occasion arises for making up your mind about a new personal situation or change, come to your decision between 6th and 16th. If the necessity to make a choice concerns an old matter of personal import, best dates will be between 20th and 25th.

For those born June 21-July 22

Dear Cancer:

It seems that other folks are going to stir you up this month. Rivalry will be one of the prods; another will be attraction; still another, a kind of irritation that will result in good after all, for through it you will be induced to make further effort. Between 7th and 20th will come the major stimulus from other folks; and in these days it looks as though you would get some personal gain and satisfaction—although you may also be the one to give it, not to receive. There will be current attraction to others as partners and allies, both in an emotional way and an occupational way. Keep alert 7-20 and be ready to seize the opportunity as it appears.

The five days between 10-14 are yours for putting yourself over, or for putting over your hopes and desires by means of yourself—your personality, appearance, approach, persuasiveness. You will find that the friends you make through here will be valuable, now and later on. Put yourself out to make friends.

Your February is positive and promising for starting studies, reading, lines of thought, designed to regulate and organize your inner life and your intellectual growth. Strongest 6-21 for this.

Some unexpressed attitude toward another seems to disturb you innerly 1-5. Yet there is a solution at this time, which deep thought and patience will show you. Emotional problems from the past come up in these days. Other emotional hurdles will have to be taken 19-26, but these are more apt to be public, or involving your public life (career, reputation, etc.) than inner. You could make a mistake through what you feel now; could jeopardize your fixed assets, both tangible and in the form of good name.

You will have decisions to make this month—involving relations with other people—which will necessitate letting go the past, and changing in favor of the future. When deciding about the past, or old matters, best time is 15-20 and poorest 20-25. About the future, best time is 6-16, and poorest 15-19.

February, 1943, Opportunities

For those born July 23-Aug. 22

Dear Leo:

It's either some private and inner enthusiasm that stirs you up to action this month, or some ambition that you haven't told everybody; at any rate, it looks as though you would be laboring in a personal way harder in your February. And toward some larger end, some achievement that would ultimately give you wider influence, and more life scope. This indication of more work will apply in your job too, if any; there will be more moving about and effort necessary. 7-20 looks like a time when all this personal initiative and drive could bring you results; the only thing that could negate it would be that you hitched your wagon to a star too far to do you any good—avoid too large objectives and impractical plans.

Another period when you stand to gain and profit will be 10-14, but differently. This is a stimulation to your emotions and inner life; you will want and can get freer outlet for your feelings, more relaxation and pleasure. And if you are talented, better outlet for your creativeness. But at this same time you will be quite susceptible through your senses, so be aware. You can do something toward bettering your love life in these days.

Through a friend, or through some equal in current contact, or through your partner, you are going to have an opportunity this month to make up your mind about a change, a new direction to your efforts; and about discarding some goal or situation lingering from the past. Don't make such terminations or new efforts 20-25; but do make them, or consider and plan them, 6-21. Within these dates there is a conflict: be careful during the days between 15-19 if the matter is new—both good and difficult influences are in operation at the time.

Between 19th and 26th you will be thinking much about the real values of your present occupation in the world, but are apt to become confused through some emotional factor involved. Or through some close relative or in-law. Look for some hidden factor involved.

For those born Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Dear Virgo:

Your own plans and your own work more opportune for you this month than will be the suggestions or activities of other folks in your life. There will be questions of go-or-stay in your work or occupation, problems involving the past or future, the old or new, the permanent or the temporary. And you will be well advised in each case to follow your own decisions and make your own itinerary. Dates when you might be led astray through other folks looks like 15-19 (relating to some change or new proposal) and 20-25 (involving the past, permanency and roots). The dates when your own thinking will be best overlap these periods, causing conflict: your own best time for making decisions about new things being 6-16, and about old matters 15-21. So pick your way all through this whole stretch.

This month brings you strong stimulation through those you love, and those you have picked as friends. Either or both seem to rouse your enthusiasm, and between 7th and 20th there appears to be some opportunity for you through these persons in your life. There could be current emotional attractions arise at this time too. Your awareness of the finer things in life, the arts and beauty, will respond to this same stimulation. A strong period for self-development for you; either intellectual or creative. Do yourself the favor of going ahead with plans to improve yourself.

In regard to money, 10-14 is the best time of your February for gain. This can be looked for through friends, allies, partners, or family members. It does not seem to be wholly up to you. 3-9 contains some opportunity also. But 19-26 looks precarious: either someone will deliberately mislead you, through fraud or trickery, or there will be mutual impracticality and loss. Be careful of legal-financial deals. Be sure your understanding or your plans aren't too large or visionary to be solidly grounded. Other folks will have a tendency to rouse you and make you respond more easily at this time.

February, 1943, Opportunities

For those born Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Dear Libra:

In the middle two weeks of your month there seems to be some opportunity for your expansion or advancement in your work in the world, or for you to add to the weight of your reputation or good name. From 7th to 20th this possibility will be with you. It will result in increase of funds if you handle it rightly; both as income and as fixed possessions. But there may be a tendency toward too hopeful attitudes which need practical foundations; or others may stir up your less common-sense side against your will. During this stretch, it doesn't seem desirable to invest what you already possess in an occupational cause, but rather that you be ready and alert for opportunities that don't involve your own investment.

Some larger than usual plans will be in your consciousness in February. There seems to be forming in your higher mind some concept which will eventually require that you make certain life changes and adaptations in its favor; and this month this concept grows harmoniously and constructively; you begin to see farther ahead in your life and in a bigger and clearer way. From 6th to 21st this will be so; yet within this same period are others when there will appear some challenge or obstacle. These included periods will be 15-19, when a precipitate action or decision on new things might be urged upon you by those you love, by a friend, and either a superior or an inferior—do nothing hastily. And 20-25, when work or home or responsibilities or something from the past might provide the motive for an error.

10-14 is the best time of your month for personal expression and popularity. Put yourself over in your work and occupation, with your superiors and with inferiors or those who work with you. Advancement is possible; or a favor.

19-26 may be a difficult stretch emotionally, with your sense responses and reactions to other people sensitively keen and perhaps exaggerated. Do not magnify your experiences with others, nor hide what you feel.

For those born Oct. 24-Nov. 22

Dear Scorpio:

Your month's experiences tend to be on the emotional side; and not all visible, either. You know clearest what is taking in your consciousness at this time; you are aware what changes and growth are stirring your depths. February forwards the latter; at times pleasantly, and at times less easily. For instance, 1-5 will be less easy to view your emotional life with serene optimism; a current problem or disappointment will come along and bother you inwardly: the current nature of it may be simply the fruit of your past. Then 15-19 a purely emotional motive may push you to such lengths as will cause sudden set-backs in occupation, reputation, domestic life and love life if you make hasty changes or start new things quickly. Two periods overlapping between 19th and 26th may be hard for you to handle inside yourself: you will feel an emotional tension and urge that you won't be able to interpret without concentrated thought and patient analysis. Try to understand yourself so that you won't blame those you care for or those you work with for what really comes from you. Defer final action or decision while you feel this way.

But—there is the other side of the picture, and that is pleasanter. The entire stretch between 7th and 20th is opportune for you to make some gains: these can be financial, or intellectual, or with other folks who influence or can aid you. Listen and be receptive to partners, loved ones, in-laws, and close relatives; they may be sources of stimulation for your right action. Watch what comes through the mail too; or by communication from a distance. Within this stretch will be 10-14, a time of romantic and affectional attraction, when others met will develop your emotional side harmoniously.

Generally speaking, February is a romantic month for you, if you are seeking this. It will be a month that stirs your feelings for others, if already married: both mate and children.

New plans for bringing your home up to date or making certain changes.

February, 1943, Opportunities

For those born Nov. 23-Dec. 21

Dear Sagittarius:

Responsive as you are to the long chance, your February will stir even you to fresh enthusiasm of this nature. The time to expect it will be between the 7th and the 20th, with an included period 10-14. And the nature of what to expect will be financial; but the motives may be several. Some inner and concealed purpose may stir you; or some one you care for; or some romantic urge. At any rate, as you know your own nature be ready to censor your impulses until they are perfectly practical, then go ahead. For this stretch looks likely to bring you profit and expansion, rightly handled. But wrongly handled, you will end up with deflated enthusiasm and money loss. The included period 10-14 is particularly opportune for you. And it is strongly romantic, or if you are married will stir up your feeling responses and your appreciation of domestic life. Susceptibility will be on the increase. Watch yourself with friends, that you don't over-react or exaggerate; but be ready to get out and around and be popular.

In those interests of yours which involve a partnership or mutual efforts, this month furnishes mixed vibrations. Where you are concerned with other folks, whether privately or legally, and the matter is new, the best time to decide will be 6-14, but not 15-19 for the latter is impetuous and you are apt to do things without full understanding or knowledge. If the matter is old, the best time will be 15-21, but not 20-25 (note that these periods overlap, making 20-21 of mixed vibrations).

Something you strongly desire, which is an ideal, and which has to do with your place among your fellows, your circle of friends, and your vision of yourself in riper years, is forming more concretely; two periods this month stimulate it. The first is 8-17, and this will mean an opportunity to focus on it and bring it nearer through subtly different attitudes; the second, however, while strongly urgent, is confused and requires deliberate steadying of your own feelings—this period is 19-26. Be quite discreet.

For those born Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Dear Capricorn:

This is a month when you will desire definite ends to things, conclusions now; when, somewhat contrary to your nature, you will deliberately take personal initiative and stir up those problems and situations that need summing up and completing. Both those hopes which others know, and also those hidden or unconfessed purposes, will come under this vibration; and while it will be true that you have opportunity for some success, it is true also that you might overreach and shoot beyond your mark. Other folks, your equals and your partners or allies, will ignite your optimism and your confidence but probably to extremes, unless you yourself tone it down. The period when you are most likely both to gain some personal expansion and desired result, and also when you should be somewhat questioning and skeptical of others, will be 7-20. Within this stretch is another, 10-14, that favors you; and that brings opportunity through local factors, through loved ones and closer relatives, and in connection with your occupation and reputation. This is the best stretch of your month.

Possibly the period hardest to handle will be 19-26. It is very emotional, but motives look confused and probably based on misunderstandings. And it does threaten your good name and occupational standing if you act on your feelings at the time. "Pleasure interfering with business" could be literal; but there is also possibility that you would be the cause of your own problem through some feeling you were unable to control. The results would be public.

In finances, and in your work, there are also mixed vibrations. Accustomed situations, and new ones, both appear to need deciding upon. When changes or new factors are in question, 6-16 favors you, but avoid being definite 15-19—and notice that these periods overlap. When it is the past, or familiar things, 15-21 is good but 20-25 is not; and these also overlap. (15-16 and 20-21 are therefore conflicting days.)

February, 1943, Opportunities

For those born Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Dear Aquarius:

This month finds you quite active below the surface, and from this comes something of importance in your work or occupation. Your gains are tied up with your own working production but also with that of your inferiors and fellow workers, who this month mean more to you. It looks as though something currently in your conscious mind or in your deeper emotional processes would urge you toward making occupational your real hopes for yourself, and your real interests, hobbies, or avocations. Such friendships as you have with those who serve you or serve with you will count for you. 7-20 is the highlight of this influence. Between 10-14-you can stir up a financial opportunity which involves your fixed assets, income, and in some way your home or home folks; be alert for clues through publication, transportation, education, communication.

There is a negative period around 19-26 when proportion and perspective could desert you temporarily under stress of some feeling or hope. Perhaps some ideal comes up against some self-indulgence, and results in mental friction. Because of this impractical look-out, be careful how you handle money. Don't overemphasize or magnify communications.

Your February shows conflicting vibrations felt personally and in connection with your personal love life and relaxations. Different influences operate concurrently. Between 6th and 16th some change for the better shows up: you express yourself better, put over your thoughts. But 15-19 personal independence and dissatisfaction make you desire for something new quickly, and mistakes threaten. Yet 15-21 a steadying influence is felt, making the past and your deeper emotional life balance this other urge. And then 20-25 something seems to block you, perhaps from your past involving others, and having a current effect upon your finances; some secret troubles. The softer side of your life doesn't get taken for granted this month, but is accented.

Many happy returns of your birthday.

For those born Feb. 19-Mar. 20

Dear Pisces:

Around the middle two weeks of your month (7-20) your present occupation and achievement won't seem big enough to hold you; ambition takes fire, and you envision something so much bigger, wider, more desirable, that there could be a challenge to the practical considerations of your life. Yet don't ignore or suppress the stimulation that comes in these days, for if you don't let it get away from you there will appear some opportunity that you can make practical. Be receptive and attentive to your friends, loved ones, persons of influence and weight in your occupational-financial picture, for through these will come some benefit. This is a good stretch for displaying showmanship and dramatizing your possibilities; also for using your originality, inventiveness, or creativeness. Especially 10-14; when your personality and appeal for others is enhanced.

All month more personal popularity is possible to gain; a possible exception being the first five days. Don't count too much on friends then, nor rely too strongly on your personality in your current environment.

Some impractical proposition, or some actual dishonesty or trickery, must be recognized 19-26, for this otherwise could be a time of financial loss or problems; either in personal income or mutual finances. Not wise to terminate existing financial arrangements; nor to make wills, take out insurance, etc. Be extra careful of all things legal.

Some transition in home and domestic life from habit to reforms seems likely. Mixed vibrations are felt. 6-16 secret or inner compulsion is felt to make changes, or even to take a new attitude: go with this tide. But 15-19 don't, for the urge here to overturn things is premature, or else you choose the wrong new substitutes. 15-21 past domestic experiences, old family friends, habitual attitudes, count for you and bring some value; but 20-25 other habits, past factors, will seem to present problems, will appear to curtail your personal independence and perhaps your vitality.

Be the teacher who is taught this one.

For Taurus: Resources, assistance, or others may prove magnified; or you imagine support which is impractical. Desire to travel, move about—go ahead, but cut cost. News by communication overoptimistic. Better perspective on a superior in afternoon points to a good conclusion. Eve: plan with loved ones. Develop mutual artistic appreciations, abilities. Good for a trip, or writing to those at a distance.

For Gemini: Something in the money situation is exaggerated or will prove impractical later. If in financial dealings with others, trust their motives, but not their suggestions, plans—you be skeptical, question everything. Even yourself! Seek support, aid, of professional persons in afternoon, and persons at or from a distance; also local superiors. Evening strong for home study. Develop strengths of partner.

For Cancer: You feel hopeful, and others met inflate this: OK to some extent, but allow no one to lead you into credulity, being over generous. Legal matters may look better than they are. Money, influence, from another helps your interests in afternoon—seek it. Confidence from an equal or partner in evening reveals mental ties. Be in public this eve, especially locally; but don't promise, talk, too much.

For Leo: What appears in guise of sure opportunity will back down somewhat later—stick to practical work prospects. Inferiors, fellow workers, may mislead through enthusiasm; those loved, too. You play subordinate role, watch and listen, wait: don't commit. Seek background support of superiors in afternoon. With inferiors, friends, financial contacts this eve don't reveal too much of your secrets—seek mental stimulations.

For Virgo: The favors, promises, of friends, family members, loved ones, will prove more generous than practical—don't count on them, or be misled. You tend to overdramatize your efforts, promise too much, or show false pride. Don't tap fixed assets for pleasure; don't invest in long chances. In afternoon confidence from an inferior or fellow worker favors you. Your original talents express freely tonight. Can be romantic.

For Libra: Avoid closing on occupational opportunities today: they will prove inflated, unfounded. Don't tap your fixed assets. Close kin, family members, neighbors, are in optimistic mood but tempt you to overestimate. Attraction to a friend in afternoon brings pleasure: seek opposite sex. In evening stay home with other family members and seek to add to mutual culture, education. Correspond with distance.

For Scorpio: Prospects of wider scope, expansion, appear; but they are somewhat exaggerated. Same with communication for distance—discriminate. You are in a mood to believe, hope, spend: if this is practical, OK, but it's up to you. Try to close pending occupational interests, situations with superiors, in afternoon. A family member can help. Evening is mental: your mind can be quickened—also train hands.

For Sagittarius: If you try to juggle financial interests on too large a scale, or with too little security, you lose—don't gamble on hope. The willingness to be deluded will come from you. Expenses increase. In afternoon a local superior, a neighbor with wide vision, an executive relative, favors you: watch for tips, clues. Evening is OK for mutual planning of ambitions, financial ways and means—if you deflate.

For Capricorn: You are more in public; others met raise your hopes, spirit. Inner burdens lift through support of others. You may be called upon for generous attitude toward a partner—give, but don't be imposed upon. You could be credulous today. In afternoon make personal contact with financial superiors, and those able to strengthen, support, your money causes. In evening be with inferiors who stimulate your philosophy.

For Aquarius: Your hopes, desires, of confidential nature are kindled today in working surroundings, by inferiors, fellow workers. You tend to tell secrets. For Pisces: You are inclined to be too freely generous, trusting, with friends, acquaintances, and with those you love: instead, incline to question their enthusiasms and counsel gently. Your ambitions, hopes, assume impractical proportions, temporarily. Afternoon brings sub rosa situations in work, with inferiors, favorable to you. Eve: avoid romantic embarrassment by avoiding extremes. Seek mental contacts with friends.

- ♄ ⋈ ♂ 9:14 am-1:14 pm: Moon-Mars quincunx
- ♄ ♃ 21 3:43-7:43 pm: Moon-Jupiter semi-sextile

Business: Tendency toward misunderstandings, especially with women or concerning their needs. Stress the service angle in morning and till 1:14 pm; but take it easy with the personalities of those who serve you. After 3:43 pm, adjust financial matters, go after collections, put the books in order, pay the bills.

Love and Romance: This is one of those charged and romantic days that somehow still contain some emotional problems. Such as jealousy, infidelity, not knowing when to stop. Yet the evening compensates. Plan the romantic date for after the dinner hour and on.

Health: Temptation to overindulge in food or drink today; hold it down. Till 1:14 pm, tendency to develop inflammations in weak spots of constitution. After 3:43 pm, excellent for taking steps toward more rapid cure of ailment. All day: have no operation to hands, arms, limbs, ribs; careful with lung treatment.

Hospitality: What you're planning against will be pretension, social enviousness, overdoing the thing. And asking the type of guest so liable. Otherwise, your entertainment can be both successful and gratifying, especially if you plan to have it this evening rather than during the daylight hours. Food: not too sweet or fattening, but appealing just the same.

Advising All Signs for Today

For Aries: You feel inclined to take it easy, even indulge; there is an inner conflict in feeling which others met tend to heighten. A temptation to take a long chance with, or dissipate for personal purposes, your fixed assets and income shows up: if you stay practical, this can prove opportune instead. Flattery from a secret opponent to be met. Eve improves: inner happiness through another. Be hospitable.

For Taurus: A day to set a guard on financial outgo. Persons in close environment call for financial help, or indulgences; if you respond, see that your generosity is reasonable. You could be tempted by envy or flattery today. You don't feel as certain of yourself as usual; feelings are unpoised. But by evening this smooths out. A happy eve with friends, neighbors, close relatives, younger or better informed persons.

For Gemini: The day places you out in front, where you need discretion to avoid wrong publicity: guard your secrets, watch your feelings, don't yield to vanity appeals. If self control is present, you will discover a real opportunity to gain and advance in career, ambitions, finances; probably involving another. Evening brings pleasure, romance, enjoyment through social life. Put on your best front.

For Cancer: An inner emotional dissatisfaction seems to challenge the day's real opportunities for you. These come through distance, your work, and the personal impressions you make. If inner upset causes laziness, feelings ruling, you will miss the good. Get around in person. Communicate with persons afar. You get perspective on work efforts. Eve: a widening of your personal scope. Travel; be hospitable.

For Leo: Your congeniality, good fellowship, inclination for pleasure, bring both temptations and opportunity. Avoid drifting, laziness, vanity; be alert for things coming, to light which favor gains for you, career progress. Those in close environment work for you behind the scenes. Avoid adverse publicity. This evening looks friendly, social, romantic; but also good for quiet self understanding.

For Virgo: Persons met today tend to weaken you by appeals to your vanity and desire for leisure. Yet someone appearing today—friend, partner, equal, perhaps a woman—is source of money gain, and successful outlook for achieving some pet hope. Discriminate, be keen. Your errors are more public. Evening shows happiness in home, with friends, or en route. Others favor you and your aspirations.

For Libra: Possibility that you could turn aside your own gains through not being on the job; you may feel disinclined to apply self today. Senses are roused, desire for personal gratification, possessions. Some opportunity is at hand in work, occupation, reputation; it depends on your vision, plus some offered strength from another. Focus. Make the evening one of local enjoyment; be with those who look up.

For Scorpio: Some favor, patronage, or happiness shows up today through others well disposed toward you; but it looks as though you could spoil it through mixed feelings, or secrets. Senses, affections, are roused, but not poised, proportionate. If finances, the real gain comes through your originality, others' help, not through long chances. Eve: romantic, affectionate, social—some further happiness is indicated.

For Sagittarius: You are extra responsive to others: two types are met. One flatters, misleads; the other is real friend with genuine help, support. Gains in fixed assets, mutual finances, joint accounts—look. A family member causes upset through day, but evening smooths. Be hospitable, beautify home, give pleasure to looker-uppers in evening: what you contribute returns in real gains.

For Capricorn: Mind more difficult to focus; dwells on desires, dissatisfactions. Watch reputation locally and otherwise; don't get upset with neighbors, inferiors, fellow workers. Someone met today causes a hunch, inner flash, and mental development; an eventual opportunity, gain, is yours. Evening: locally social. Also romantic. An equal stirs up an aspiration and fosters it. Get around and meet people.

For Aquarius: There will be found a financial and work opportunity today if you don't miss it through emotional focus on yens or problems. False flattery tempts. So does inertia. Pleasure counts more than effort. Yet in working surroundings advancement and money promise hovers; a friendly attitude helps. This evening is the time for romance, social life, relaxation; seek friends among followers.

For Pisces: You could show your weaker side in public or to others: appeal for flattery, appreciation—idleness. Home budgets, expenses, need trimming and organizing; domestic emotions are exaggerated, but may upset. There is some real happiness, benefit, of personal nature in the offing, through loved ones or in love life. Day strong for developing creative talents. Eve: romantic, more personal popularity.

Business: Contrary purposes and motives involving those higher up are likely to rise to today's surface; treat them with tact and diplomacy—not the day to make breaks or try to settle serious differences with customers or superiors. Caution advised if dealing with eccentric or radical types. Late afternoon sees improved business judgment on small items. Evening: go slow with servants.

Love and Romance: Chivalry, generosity and magnetism are in the air today, especially from later afternoon on throughout the evening. But also around about will be felt some immature impulses to disturb existing relations; or to respond unduly to new magnets. Rather stick with what is known. Take the initiative in romance this evening.

Health: Not wise to shift mode of treatment for serious ailment today, even if temporarily low resistance is registered; nerves require attention, in both those well and ill. Evening: exaggerated or inflamed symptoms. All day: have no operation or drastic treatment to heart or spine or circulation of the blood. The tendency is to take chances today—a bad procedure with no dividends.

Hospitality: It's all right to plan something bigger and better for this date if you so desire. But it doesn't look so sure for planning something new or untried by you; the unknown guest is not guaranteed either. Try to raise your social standing by the entertainment you give on this date; so pick your guests. Food: the better, the heartier, the more desirable.

Advising All Signs for Today

For Aries: A more harmonious, affectionate, and kindly day externally, with the softer side of your life uppermost. But inwardly is gathering some resentment of present restrictions that could burst tomorrow into a mistake. Your current attitude doesn't take all facts into equal consideration. By later afternoon and through evening romance, pleasure, art, love of beauty, takes the top spot. Harmonize home.

For Taurus: Your mind considers your fixed assets, possessions, and home with comparative serenity. But in current income and occupational status you are inclining toward unripe changes, hasty new factors, which friends may have incited. This continues throughout day and eve as motive. This evening be at home to neighbors, and local residents of cultural standing. Good eve for stirring up your own mind, ideas.

For Gemini: Your personal pace is speeded up, jerky, today, due to yens for more personal liberty and outlet. Your mind is receptive and impressionable. Today's stimulation can be cause of forcing some personal change needed, or it can eventuate in a hasty shift not so good: influence continues tomorrow. Your evening finds you generous and tolerantly inclined toward inferiors, neighbors, folks you meet.

For Cancer: There are financial items to be taken care of on this date, and your attention is here given. Yet inwardly you are not serene, but tend to want a quick termination and complete new deal, involving not only money but inner emotional life as well. This grows today, is met again tomorrow. This evening is opportunity to be better liked personally, to attract followers. Seek romance if wished.

For Leo: Today your personal approach, impression made, manners, appearance, counts for or against the day's efforts. Women favor you personally. But all day today and again tomorrow you lack personal continuity and steadiness; you are attracted to change, novelty, for itself. New acquaintances attract; the propositions of friends interest without investigation. By evening your more lovable, romantic, side attracts others.

For Virgo: You are not inclined to tell all you know, or are considering; yet in work, occupation, with higher-ups, you feel dissatisfied, yearn for new circumstances or at least more liberty. You are more conscious of factors around you that are undeclared, or actually withheld. This evening friends and loved ones are more sympathetic, appealing; some attraction is felt. You are more impressionable.

For Libra: Whatever it is you are hoping, envisioning, today, seems to stir up restless independence. Consciousness of more talent, more education, more intelligence, than you have opportunity to express at present leads you to considering a rather hasty change—today and tomorrow. Think carefully. This evening seek confreres who develop your mind, teach you. Join local uplift activities. Open your home.

For Scorpio: You feel ambitious, inclined to aspire to public recognition. Display your education, knowledge, philosophy, in occupational circumstances. All day and evening on this date, continuing tomorrow, home dissatisfactions gather, you seek terminations and new orders. A quick decision jeopardizes either occupation or reputation. Evening favors professional contacts, writing letters, local activities.

For Sagittarius: Search for farther horizons is stimulated. Your mind reaches for more knowledge, comparisons, or travel. Today, tomorrow, a situation with an equal or partner shows signs of sudden upset, quick change, in favor of freedom or novelty. If necessary OK, but if exaggerated, regrets. This evening finds you somewhat impressionable and affectionate, or romantic. Watch your expenditures for pleasure.

For Capricorn: A sudden decision, or an unexpected situation, is developing in connection with your work, inferiors, fellow workers, and finances. But most of it is secret—yet. Try to be adaptable, yet not hasty. Too much feeling of independence jeopardizes work. From later afternoon through this evening you tend to meet others who act as guides, counsellors, mediators, draw out your inner attitudes.

For Aquarius: A day when others' influence counts more than your personality alone. They present you with self contrasts. All today, and again tomorrow, there is potential upset in your love life, possibly unexpected, but perhaps brought about by your own reaction to someone met. Try not to demand too quick changes, adjustments. This evening find friends among followers, those with greater inner resources.

For Pisces: Your sympathy with those who serve and follow rises today. You incline to be more receptive in working surroundings. Some quick, or unexpected, conclusion to a personal matter either private or hidden is in the offing, today or tomorrow. It could involve a domestic upset. Evening should be social, friendly, hospitable. Loved ones are inclined to favor you more. Seek romance if wished. Public amusement OK.

Late evening: good looking plans are liable to distortion, selfishness, something not quite right—re-examine them.

Defer intestinal or abdominal operations; and take no severe laxatives. Keep the diet as bland as possible.

Hospitality: If you know guests are envious of each other, or of you, don't invite them on this date. A morning affair should be active; with that type of guest, of both sexes. Choose home entertainment rather than public places. Those you lead stir your wit, ability to express.

For Libra: Temporary dissatisfactions with home, occupation, news, long range prospects, lingers through morning. Also in am till midafternoon your ideas, decisions, may clash with fellow workers', friends' and superiors'. Modesty steers you around friction with relatives. In evening your personal appeal is heightened, others are attracted. You express better. Be with loved ones, seek romance, and public amusements.

For Scorpio: Mental depression in earlier morning over money prospects, long range outcomes, results of partnership, doesn't last. Morning till midafternoon you tend to clash with superiors, loved ones, other sex, in-laws. Messages, visitors, from elsewhere stir disharmony. But then on through evening others click mentally with you, make you seem more brilliant. Entertain friends in your own home.

For Sagittarius: Temporize if others present personal disappointments this am, or money set backs; be tactful with mate, don't feature past issues. Till midafternoon family members, in-laws, persons afar, demand enforced adjustments. Make them tolerantly. Rest of day and through this evening looks romantic, others stir you mentally, you speak better. Take short trips, visit locally, seek entertainment with friends.

For Capricorn: Secret doubts of self, worries, remain through am. Obstacles seem to appear in work, with inferiors, fellow workers. Till midafternoon you take private offense at authoritative attitude of others; or they at yours? You could tell secrets. But later day and this evening restores more inner harmony, perspective on self. Be with others sharing your beliefs. Or study by yourself. Inferiors congenial.

For Aquarius: Till mid afternoon is not the time to contest others' lead, especially financial superiors'. Friends may be a financial drain; mate disagree with you on money matters. There is something disappointing you in love life, secretly. Perhaps from your past, or that of another. By evening you shine again personally. With your friends, those you care for, romantic contacts, you may surprise yourself. Get around.

For Pisces: From recent days lingers through am some dissatisfaction in occupation, with hopes, or with friends. Till midafternoon prospect is for personal clashes in occupation, with superiors, or over personal authority. Other sex is not as harmonious. But this evening you take top spot, have inner understanding of self and others. OK for quiet evening, or entertaining in your own home, with mate.

Your Daily Horoscope

Sunday, February 28, 1943

Time given is Eastern War Time; make corrections to your locality—subtract 1 hour for Central, 2 for Mountain and 3 for Pacific War Time.

In effect all day

- ♀ △ ♀ Venus-Pluto trine till March 1st
- ♂ ✕ ♀ Mercury-Jupiter quincunx till March 1st
- ♂ △ ♀ Uranus-Neptune trine till March 11th

- ♀ ✕ ♀ All day and till March 2nd: Venus-Saturn sextile
- ♂ in ♀ Moon in Sagittarius all day
- ♂ ♀ 1:46-5:46 pm: Moon-Mars semi-sextile
- ♀ || ♀ End of Venus-Neptune parallel at 6:07 pm (since 27th)
- ♂ □ ♀ 7:22 pm till tomorrow 5:22 am: Moon-Neptune square

Business: The mind naturally gravitates to larger horizons today, contemplating both longer distances and longer terms of time. This is quite all right, if we keep our plans fluid and more or less general. Don't attempt the too specific in regard to details in programs or projects laid out today—get the outline now and fill it in later. Evening: rest, relax; avoid impractical schemes.

Love and Romance: It's a good afternoon for being active outdoors together. Or working together; you can get closer by accomplishing something mutual. Evening is both romantic and doubtful: there is the urge to attract and be attracted, side by side with some contrary and subtle emotional disturbances. So be your best self, and make allowances.

Health: General improvement in most ailments is probable today, if we have not recently irritated them. Some good to be obtained from mind over matter, judiciously applied to the nerves, if at all jumpy. Avoid leaning on false sense of strength in afternoon. All day: have no operation to hip or leg, or to the arms; watch nerve reactions to emotion. No severe treatment to lungs.

Hospitality: Your best bet will be to have it while it's daylight. And to make it either some kind of active entertainment or meeting, inviting direct and vital guest types; or an artistic afternoon with music, etc. In the latter case, pick your guests appropriately. But the evening looks difficult in some way, not obviously; some situation could develop taxing to handle successfully. Food: day, crisp, hearty, sweet. Eve, just simple, not stimulating.

Advising All Signs for Today

For Aries: Do your harmonizing with, confiding in, others (including mate) this morning or afternoon. The afternoon is most energetic, you feel personally alert and ready, can make things end your way if you go after this. Clean up jobs around your home, also state of home budgets. This evening may bring subtleties that confuse in relations with others; anything hidden makes trouble. Guard against giving offense.

For Taurus: Use the daylight hours for writing letters, going visiting, meeting others with similar beliefs and intellectual tastes. Good day for getting closer by confiding, particularly in afternoon. Invite folks from other spots to visit you. But in evening guard against unintentional offense to inferiors or friends: results could be terminations you wouldn't understand. Good eve for reading, thinking.

For Gemini: Looks like a sympathetic and friendly day. Be on the receiving end of confidences from loved ones, or share yours; same with friends. Folks met tend to draw you out about your beliefs, provide stimulating discussion. In afternoon tackle state of home budgets, or joint accounts. Go out and make friends. In evening there could arise some emotional tangle, or threat to reputation. Ask for frankness.

For Cancer: All day and eve good for drawing out others on the subject of their unusual, occult, experiences, their beliefs, private avocations. Seek such discussion. This afternoon there may be attraction to resourceful, active types, superior or inferior. Evening: home folks may be touchy, emotionally upset. Keep out of scenes. If with those who look up to you, be sure you are understood, and practical.

For Leo: Get in all your visiting, local or otherwise, during the daylight hours; write, or communicate, then. Afternoon is good for working around home, or with inferiors; or offering service to those loved. Get outdoor exercise, particularly walking. Others met on this date tap your private life, stimulate your confidences—but be money sensible. This eve affectionate, romantic, problems possible. Seek clear understanding.

For Virgo: Day and eve seek the type of friend who stimulates your mind, planning, philosophies. Perhaps an inferior. Personal service offered to friends brings good reward. Folks met today are involved with your various financial interests, or long range plans. Afternoon active: get around locally, seek romance, or work with loved ones around home. Evening: don't allow money upsets with others, or in home.

For Libra: If seeking popularity, romance, or to make other favorable impression, select the daylight hours. Let your personality swing things your way. All day and eve draw out loved ones on their opinions, beliefs; or read together. Seek congenial local persons. Afternoon: accomplish, finish, home jobs, or those around community. This evening personal feelings are too sensitive, you magnify experiences.

For Scorpio: Confidential attractions to inferiors, those who follow or look up to you, possible on this date. Seek bigger perspective all day and eve in home matters; have free discussion with family members re future outlook, plans. Visit, or communicate, write, during daylight hours. Afternoon; be active in local interests, with neighbors. Evening: you appear secretly touchy, especially with those loved, in romance.

For Sagittarius: Wisdom suggests making most of day for meeting friends, seeking romance, creating more home happiness. Others met on this date can develop you mentally, rouse your aspirations, clarify your values. Seek discussions. Afternoon: straighten out money matters. In evening misunderstanding looms with friends, those loved, and family members; make yourself clear. Don't magnify personal experiences.

For Capricorn: Be attentive to others today if money comes up: they can help you with better plans, suggestions, and facts you need. The afternoon is your most positive time personally; take the initiative with friends, and in home matters; bring your private reserves to notice. Home aspirations can be brought nearer. This evening watch your good reputation; guard the serenity of your love life.

For Aquarius: Contacts made in person can tap a wealth of information, suggestion, in followers, lookers-up, friends, and also in those loved, on this date; you express better, draw them out. Do your local or more distant visiting during daylight hours; communicate then too. Afternoon is good for quiet reading, study. But in evening do not argue beliefs with friends; nor let confusion arise over money.

For Pisces: Day more personally harmonious than eve. Good for exchanging confidences with others met, and with those cared for, re your deepest hopes, plans, beliefs. Friends tend to follow you this afternoon. Give some time to working on pet avocations, hobbies. This evening brings tests with those you encounter personally; there are some secret factors that seem to cause misunderstanding, or hurts.

for excess baggage every time we traveled!" "Yet she was an Aries woman, you said, didn't you? And Aries doesn't hoard or hang on," I noted. "That's right, she was Aries." I thought, and said, "It would likely be either Cancer or Capricorn rising, to provide the possessivism—attachment motive—I wonder if we couldn't tell which by looking up any planets in those signs. Did your mother look like Capricorn, for instance? Describe her, if you will," I requested. "Well, she was a tall, round and heavy breasted woman—" "Okay," I interrupted. "It wasn't Capricorn. Let's try Cancer." We got out the ephemeris for her year and month. Uranus was in Cancer, that would give height—and eccentricity. Venus was in Cancer; that would give pleasure in memories. And Cancer rising would give the hold-on motive. And as Saturn was in Scorpio, we felt justified in erecting a chart with that Ascendant, for this would complete the intense sense of possession (Saturn, permanency) originating in Venus' love of pretty things. And I may add that this chart has worked perfectly on all the rest of the mother's case history. Even to accounting for the mother's nickname when she was a little girl: Dottie Dimple. She had had so many dimples that her parents had so dubbed her. Venus rising does tend toward dimples, singular or plural.

28th: I have met a whole family of Leos. The husband and wife are both Leo, the husband's brother is Leo, and so is the wife's sister. Quite an imposing subject to study. People of identical sun signs usually have to have quite different charts otherwise in order to get along. This family does get along, so I will worm out of them the data, gradually, and not by asking. Just by listening, putting two and two together, and perhaps, just perhaps, rousing their interest in the subject.

HOW TO UNDERSTAND YOUR BIBLE

By Manly Palmer Hall

A PHILOSOPHER'S INTERPRETATION OF
OBSCURE AND PUZZLING PASSAGES

The Christian Bible is the greatest book in English literature. But like most other great books, it must be approached with understanding, gentleness, impersonality, and a sincere desire to find truth. All the great faiths of the world are parts or fragments of the Ancient Wisdom. It has been difficult for human beings to accept this truth, and for lack of inter-religious understanding there has been very little religious understanding.

Historically the Bible is of little value. If we consider the Gospel account in the light of comparative religion, we shall find that there is very little contained therein not to be found in other great religious systems. It is also important to remember that nearly every personality described or discussed in the Bible is primarily a symbol and not an historical individual. It is a great mistake to believe that there is great spiritual virtue in the perpetuation of history or the worship of ancestors.

To Peter, Christ was God, justified by the doctrine and demonstrated by the miracles. Peter questioned nothing; and from his undoubting acceptance descended the Church of Christ, built upon his name, believing without questioning. Paul realized that it was not Jesus who walked the dusty roads of Syria but the "Christ in you" that is the "hope of glory." He realized that Christ is a principle and not a man, that Jesus had come to "bear witness" for that principle. Paul sought to honor the teacher by honoring the teaching.

WHICH ANSWERS
do YOU seek
of Life?

Are you bewildered, confused, confounded, pushed around? Does life seem to you something you must guard against? Do you feel insecure or helpless? Do you say to yourself almost every day, every week, "I don't see WHY!"

If you are living that way, you need help. You have tried to get help, not once but several times; not in one place only, but in many. There may have been moments when you were helped and you continued to ask your questions.

We all keep on questioning our lives—until we find astrology.

There is only one source of answer to all the queries you can put, and that source is your own horoscope. All other sources of help are general, not individual. Your own natal chart is individual.

Ask YOUR HOROSCOPE and be at Peace

Only ignorance (fear of the unknown) can defeat you. Ignorance of your own true self, ignorance of the shape of your life, past and to come, ignorance of YOUR pattern of life—these are all things that ignorance subtly fears and which wisdom knows and uses. Once you know more about yourself and your powers you will cease to be as vulnerable—you will possess an inward sense of sureness, of security that cannot be described—

PERSONAL PROBLEMS

ONLY A HERMIT HAS NONE

"He didn't understand me!"

"She misunderstood me!"

"I can't understand them!"

You can break your heart over a human relationship. Or you can know happiness transcending any other experience.

Some one in your life can be a source of inspiration that carries you forward farther than you could otherwise have expected to go alone. Someone else can block you, thwart you, become the barrier to all you might have done.

And did you ever stop to think that you are inspiring some one and blocking some one else? You are. We all are. Being a decent, cooperating person of good will, you certainly don't like to think of yourself as an unpopular Great Big Ogre; you would like to know what to do to get out of other people's light.

Want to get past your own human blockades?

All right then, why not find out? That's exactly what Wynn's Comparison Service is for.

Astrology reveals why the same person can be a help and a blessing to one person and a sorrow and trouble to another person. It's a matter of the meeting of the two horoscopes, and how the planets from one influence the planets (sensitive vibration points in our natures) in the other. It's sure and unfailing. Whatever you feel and all your experience through another is in your horoscopes: mutual love, mutual resentment, one-sided love or one-sided dislike, superiority, inferiority—any and all human psychological possibilities are there.

You can look up everyone you ever knew and everyone you ever will know. You can use your Comparison Service right up to the last day of your life. You SHOULD use it every day you live.

Anyone born between 1870 and 1940 can be looked up in this Service. It is based, not on your Sun sign only, but on the individual positions of your nine planets. And on the individual positions of the planets in the chart of the person you are looking up, too. Use it for one person or a thousand; for anyone whose birth day and year you know.

There are certain people you can't very well avoid, to whom you are in duty bound—in-laws, for instance, relatives, children. But you can manage these everyday contacts better, if you know where the basic cause of friction lies. Look these persons up in your Service; then start out anew with better understanding.

Your Comparison Service is written in plain, definite terms. It leaves you nothing to do but refer to the correct pages. You do not need to know any astrology to make use of it.

Every young person about to face life should have this Service; why not ensure the progress and happiness of those near to you by giving it to them? You yourself should have had it long ago.
